MR. NEWELL EXPLAINS

The Reason Why He Signed the Court Petition in the Neagle Case

Aug. 29th, 1914.
To the Editor of the GRAPHIC

Dear Sir:—
The writer has been asked why he became interested in the Neagle-Childs-Police matter, and has to state that, having no personal acquaintance with either Mr. Neagle or Mr. Childs, does not know the degree of value they may, or may not be, to the City of Newton, but is very much of the opinion that there should be a Law and Condition under which it would be impossible for any person in the employ of, or holding a public position under the City Government, to be arrested, tried, convicted and discharged from service, and be reinstated under the veil of a Controversy between the Mayor, Board of Aldermen and Chief of Police; save vindication through new trial.

The Garden City of New England should be relieved from a possible repetition of disgrace.

Yours very truly,
GEO. F. NEWELL.
87 Chestnut St.,
West Newton.

SHALL REPRESENTATIVES BE INSTRUCTED?

The Registrars of Voters have this week certified to signatures of two hundred and fifty voters on applications of Daniel O'Connell and others that the following question be placed on the State Election ballots on November 2, 1914:

"Shall the Representatives from this district be instructed to support the Initiative and Referendum, so as to give the voters the power to accept or reject at the polls measures that have been proposed by petition?"

This application to have this question submitted to the voters of Newton is made under the provisions of Chapter 819 of the Acts of the year nineteen thirteen. The Act provides that upon petition of two hundred voters in any representative district questions of public policy shall be placed on the official ballots to be used at the State Election, the question to take effect if a majority of votes cast are in the affirmative. Not more than two questions may be submitted under this Act at one election.

COLONIAL THEATRE—"Sari," Henry W. Savage's production of Emmerich Kalman's internationally famous operetta came to Boston from New York heralded as not only the most emphatic hit of last season in Manhattan but as an offering that had achieved success in an unusual degree in nearly every important capital of Europe. Boston theatregoers who crowded the Colonial Theatre on the opening night of the season by their enthusiastic demonstration of approval of the piece admitted the justice of the claims that had been made for it and added their verdict of commendation to that of music lovers of other metropolises. "Sari" has been performed since to a succession of audiences characterized as much by their social brilliance as by their unusual size. Every performance has been greeted by a gathering which has virtually taxed the capacity of the large theatre. Such instantaneous and tremendous success would be unusual in the depth of winter; at this season of the year, when the casual theatregoer has so many other things than entertainment to distract his attention from the playhouse, it is little less than phenomenal.

ACCOUNTANTS REPORT

On the Books of Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Co.

The accountant and engineer in the employ of the Public Service Commission, appointed to look into the affairs of the Middlesex and Boston Street Railway Company have completed their work and submitted a report to the Commission.

The account reports that the financial accounts of the company are kept correctly although in the opinion of the examiner the amount voted by the company for depreciation which is $67,003.10 is excessive if the maintenance is properly provided.

The earnings of the company are not large according to the report, and the dividends in the past five years have not exceeded five per cent.

The increase in expenditures due to advance in pay of employees was $7,467.24.

There are no recommendations of importance although the financial accounts of the company as found by the examiners are reported in detail.

The examiners state that there are no changes in operating expenses that should have been included in the accounts for betterments or additions.

JACKSON—KELLOGG

The wedding of Miss Marguerite Kellogg, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allyn Kellogg of Newtonville, and Mr. Walter Francis Jackson of the same village, took place on Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Highland Park. The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by Rev. Francis E. Webster of Christ Church, Waltham. The bride, who was gowned in white embroidered tulle, was accompanied by the Misses Eleanor M. Scammon of Lexington and Pauline B. Gaudet of Winthrop, as bridesmaids. Mr. Herbert Francis Jackson of Newtonville was the best man.

After a brief wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will make their home at 466 Albemarle road, Newtonville.

THE NEWTON TECHNICAL HIGH SCHOOL

Entrance examinations for admission to the Newton High Schools will be held on Friday, September 11, in Room 104 Newton Technical High School.

9:00-10:00 Arithmetic.
10:15-11:15 English.
1:30-2:30 Geography.
2:45-3:45 History.

Notice of intention to take these examinations should be sent to Ernest Stephens, 55 Langford St., Gloucester, Mass., not later than September 7.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—The Craig Players had a great send-off for their ninth Boston season on Monday evening with "Over Night."

Castle Square playgoers are keen judges of acting but they are also loyal friends, with a warm corner for those who year in and year out have resisted the glamor of the "Great White Way" to throw in their lot with Boston work and Boston play.

"Over Night" was given for a week in April, but there is no apparent diminution of interest, and there may have to be another revival. The play deserves its success, for it is good, wholesome fun clear through.

Next week Belasco's biggest play, "The Girl of the Golden West" returns to Castle Square, with Mary Young as "The Girl" and all who have seen her powerful interpretation of this colorful role, will want to see it again and bring others with them.

A NATIONAL RESERVATION

Mt. Washington Soon To Be Owned By the United States

After two years of negotiations, the government and the owners have come to an agreement for the purchase of Mount Washington under the Weeks Forestry law, and it is probable that the Forest Reservation Commission will promptly authorize the transaction.

This is by all odds the most important purchase that the Government has made in connection with the White Mountain National Forest establishment, both from a sentimental and from an economic standpoint. Scenically it is the grandest part of the mountain country, and the Mecca of all tourists to the region whether they journey afoot, by train or by automobile. Economically, also, it is of great consequence, for here there are still standing some very considerable bodies of original forest, and three New England rivers of size, the Saco, the Androscoggin and the Connecticut, all draw important tributaries from this mountain head.

Already the Government owns some of the summits of the Presidential range, Madison and Adams and their northern slopes. This latest purchase includes all of the great central peak, Mount Washington, together with its flanks and spurs and six other Presidential peaks as well, Clay, Jefferson and Adams of the northern group, with Monroe, Franklin and Pleasant in the southern chain. Within this area lies the Great Gulf, that beautiful wild ravine that digs six miles deep into the easterly side of Washington, a glorious wilderness of primeval forest. On the same side, but farther south are the Huntington and Tuckerman ravines, where, in ages past, glaciers dwelt.

Nor is that all for the purchase will include that long southerly ridge, the Montalban, which for fully eight miles flows down from Boott Spur, close under the cone of Washington, to the lower end of Crawford Notch at Bartlett.

This embraces the knobs known as the Davises, Stairs Mountain, noted for its giant granite treads, Mount Resolution, Mount Crawford commanding one of the most sublime views of the Notch and Mount Hope.

In all it represents some 35,000 acres, which added to what the Government has already taken on the slopes south of Jefferson and Randolph townships, in the Wild River country, and in the Pinkham Notch, makes an almost solid body of more than 100,000 acres in the northeast quarter of the White Mountain quadrangle.

WOMEN BEAR WAR BURDENS

It is announced that in France the women are to carry on the business while their husbands are at the front, and that in Germany the women will harvest the crops in the fields while the crop of men whom they have laboriously borne and reared are mown down on the red field of battle. For every man who marches with the army, some woman at home must do double duty. The weight of war falls upon the women as well as upon the men. Ought not women as well as men to have a voice in deciding whether wars shall be?

CITY HALL

The Playground Commission has awarded the contract for grading the Waban playground to the lowest bidder T. D. Sullivan & Sons Co., who have already begun work. The contract for the fencing of the same playground has been awarded to the W. Snow Iron Works.

WAR EXPERIENCES

Several Newton Residents Return This Week From Europe

Several residents of this city, who returned from Europe this week had some exciting experiences in the war zone.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. H. Kimberley of Fairfax street, West Newton, were in Southern France when the war began and being unable to reach Paris by railroad, as the trains were all in use for troops, they chartered an automobile at an expense of $200 and finally reached the French capital, although stopped by soldiers on several occasions.

"We were in the town of Clermont Ferrand, about 261 miles from Paris, when danger seemed to lurk on all sides," said Mrs. Kimberley. "We tried at first to obtain passage by rail, but finding this impossible, we secured an automobile at an expense of $200 in gold, which seemed very reasonable, and started on the dash to the capital of the French nation."

"We got into the car at 12 o'clock noon and drove until night fall, when we stopped at a small village. On the first lap of the journey, which I will never forget, we were held up by the soldiery several times, but allowed to proceed after short delays."

"The next day we finished the trip so far as the automobile was concerned, but we had out troubles after that. On the train from Paris to Havre we were only allowed to take our hand baggage. That made matters uncomfortable, of course."

"We had plenty of gold, Mrs. Kimberley went on, 'for when conditions commenced to look bad I suggested that we get a large sum of money on our letter of credit. This was done and for that reason we had plenty of cash to hasten our journey home. I shall never forget that ride in the big limousine through the South of France," said Mrs. Kimberley. "We had a fearless chauffeur and he drove the most of the time at break neck speed. In fact that was the way people travelled the most of the time in France about the time we were there. It was a mad race, here, there, everywhere. In Paris it seemed impossible to get a taxi cab at any price, they having been commandeered by the army."

Another Newtonian who arrived on the Franconia was Mr. George Hudson, who was in charge of a party of 20 touring the continent. They arrived in Paris a week before Germany declared war on France and were contemplating a trip through Switzerland, but on the day they were to start they encountered two travellers who showed them handfuls of American gold which the Swiss would not accept as payment for necessities.

The party decided to go back, and started for England. On the train, they were obliged to sit on their suit cases all day, without a bite to eat, or anything to drink. In London, an American dollar was only worth three shillings and six pence.

Mr. Hudson declared that nearly all the schools of the various counties in England had been converted into hospitals, and that the Duke of Portland had turned his great riding school into one.

Samuel Lindsay of Newton Centre, who also arrived on the Franconia had been visiting his family in Ayr, the birthplace of the poet Burns, playing golf. He had no experiences beyond being offered a sovereign—about $5—for a double eagle of American mintage. Seventy-five per cent exchange had been offered in Glasgow and Edinburgh banks.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Mr. Gordon M. Reese, who has been the Boys' Secretary at the Newton Y. M. C. A. for the past year, left for his home in Lancaster, Pa., on September first. Mr. Reese expects to enter the Theological School and study for the Episcopal ministry about the first of October. The many friends whom he has made in Newton wish him well in his new work.

Mr. F. A. Cumming, who succeeds Mr. Reese, as Boys' Secretary of the Association, began his duties September first. Mr. Cumming's former field was Springfield, Mass., where he did splendid work. Before that he had charge of the Boys' Department at Burlington, Vt. A clipping from one of the Springfield papers gives some idea of the esteem in which Mr. Cumming was held in his former field.

"Mr. Cumming had many friends in Springfield before he came back here as Boys' Secretary, after spending two and one half years as Boys' Secretary in Burlington, Vt. Previous to that he had been an assistant in the Springfield Boys' Department two and one half years under L. W. DeGast. Since coming back to Springfield Mr. Cumming has won many friends."

Mr. John Sonderman, who has been Assistant in the Physical Department for the past year, will not be with us next year. Mr. Sonderman is now doing work with the Boy Scouts and expects to locate in a larger field very soon. He has had several good offers of one which he will accept.

Mr. R. W. Young, who has been Assistant in the Boys' Department for the past year, will take Mr. Sonderman's place as Mr. Macpherson's Assistant. Mr. Young has spent the month of August studying at the Summer School at Silver Bay.

MRS. McCONNELL DEAD

Mrs. Ellen Louise McConnell, wife of Mr. George McConnell, who for many years has served as Treasurer of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, passed away at her residence, 21 Greenville street, Roxbury, Sunday night, after an illness of four weeks.

Mrs. McConnell, who was Miss Graham before her marriage, was born in Malden, and had lived in the Roxbury district 45 years. She had many friends in Malden and Newton.

DEATH OF MR. DONALD

Mr. William A. Donald, a prominent wool merchant of Boston up to the time of his retirement some years ago, died at his home at Chestnut Hill on Tuesday. Mr. Donald was born at Andover, and was the son of William C. Donald and came of Scotch ancestry.

During Mr. Donald's business life he was a member of the firm of Hall-owell & Donald. He was a member of the Union and the Country Clubs, and is survived by three children, Mrs. Frank W. Hall-owell of Chestnut Hill, whose husband is a member of the wool firm of Hall-owell, Jones & Donald; Gordon Donald, who succeeded his father as an active member, and Malcolm Donald of Mattapan, a Boston lawyer. The late Rev. E. Winchester Donald, rector of Trinity Church, was a brother.

EDITORIAL

I have called attention once before
to the fallacious argument, annually presented in political affairs, of the existence of a "county ring." It is alleged that our county officials are in a combination to keep themselves in office and to handle the county money
in such a manner as to favor their friends and punish their enemies.
This is popularly believed to be done
to the detriment of the community,
causing high taxes, waste and extravagance.
Let us examine the facts and see
if present conditions in Middlesex County warrant these conclusions.
Middlesex County is the most populous county, not composed of a single city
like Boston, in the entire United States, and contains about 700,000 persons. It has a valuation of over eight hundred millions of dollars, or about one sixth of the entire Commonwealth, being second to Suffolk, and well above Essex, which stands third
with a little over five hundred millions.
With this heavy valuation, it has a debt of less than four hundred thousand dollars and county property valued at about three millions, nearly eight times its indebtedness. If this is the result of "ring" rule, let us hope that the same system will soon spread to the entire Commonwealth.

It is undoubtedly true that there are instances of corruption or extravagance
among the large number of persons employed by the County, but these cases ought not to be regarded as typical, but as exceptional, and the responsible county officers are just as anxious to "turn the rascals out" as are all good citizens. In the meantime let us give our honest, competent officials the encouragement they deserve for the faithful service they have always rendered this historic old county of Middlesex.

If any change is necessary or desirable, let it be based upon some facts more substantial than the existence of a mythical "county ring."

The workings of the present direct primary law in this state are greatly hampered by the large number of offices to be filled by popular election,
and the law will never be a great success until it is combined with what is known as the short ballot. This would mean the cutting down of the offices
to be filled at an election by the people to the most important executive and legislative positions.

Outside of the national offices,
which, of course should be filled by direct vote, there are many state and county positions where there is little need of popular approval. The state ticket might well be reduced to the offices of governor, lieutenant governor and members of the executive council, and the present elective offices
of secretary of the commonwealth,
treasurer, state auditor, and attorney general, could just as well be filled by election by the Legislature or by appointment by the governor. Just why the offices of clerks of courts, registers
of deeds and registers of probate
should be filled by popular vote is hard to fathom. All of these places could be properly filled by appointment. The County Commissioners should be elected by the people, but they should have the power of appointment of all other county officers such as sheriff, district
attorney, and court officials.

The County Commissioners now have to provide appropriations for all of these offices but are without power to restrain or control the ultimate expenditure.

By establishing a short ballot containing only the names of the governor, lieutenant governor, councillors
and county commissioners, the voters
could concentrate all their interest on
so few officials that it would be possible to elect the very best men to these positions.

It is interesting to note that of the seven regular Republican candidates for the party nomination for representatives at the coming state primary, four are natives of Newton, two have lived here nearly all their lives and the father of the last has been a resident here for nearly forty years.

The season for stealing fruit is rapidly approaching and the discomforts of suburban life will probably reach a climax with those citizens who attempt to grow their own apples, pears and grapes. The matter should be handled in the most drastic manner by the police and the judge. It does little good to the lads who are caught stealing fruit to give them only a lecture.
They brag of their exploit the next day and encourage their companions
to go and do likewise. A heavy fine on the boys or on their parents would probably bring about some reform,
altho with organized gangs of hoodlums coming into Newton on every street car for the purpose of robbing orchards, it might prove only a temporary expedient.

Next Tuesday the Massachusetts
Public Service Commission resumes
its hearing on the matter of increasing the rate of fare on the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company
lines. With the increase in the fare against the increase and it would be most advisable for Newton to make a strong protest on the same lines.

Mayor Childs has done the right thing in reappointing Mr. A. W. B.
Huff as the chief election officer in ward seven. Mr. Huff rendered long and faithful service in this position
and the failure to reappoint him last fall was a great injustice.

With a possibility of street railway
fares increasing to six cents and railroad mileage jumping a quarter of a cent, it will soon be brought home to the average man that the "consumer pays the bill."

Returned travellers from Europe
all seem to appreciate the blessings of
"Home, Sweet Home."

MILEAGE RATES TO INCREASE

Mileage rates on the Boston &
Maine, Central Vermont, New Haven
and Boston & Albany railroads are to be advanced from 2 to 2 1/4 cents commencing Oct. 1 if the interstate commerce and the Massachusetts public service commissions approve the tariffs now filed with these organizations
asking for this increase.

These changes would increase the price of 500-mile books to $11.25 and 1000-mile books to $22.50, according to the tariff bureau of the public service commission. These new rates are made on the grounds of recomman-dations from the interstate commerce commission.

The tariff bureau of the Massachusetts commission adds:
"They have also discontinued honoring coupons from 500-mile books issued by other railroads upon their lines, limiting the 500-mile books practically to local use, and have discontinued accepting coupons from the 1000-mile books issued by the New York Central, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Philadelphia & Reading,
Rutland, West Shore, and Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, which have formerly been accepted by the Boston & Albany."

"The Boston & Albany has also, as of Oct. 1, discontinued 100-ride local tickets in the state of Massachusetts (limited to party named for period of six months from issue), which have formerly been sold at rate of 1 1/2 cents per mile per ride, and the 10-ride tickets which have been issued between local stations at the price of nine single fares. Where the single fare is based upon 2 1/4 cents a mile
this reduction would make the actual cost of ticket on the basis of 2 cents.
Both of these classes have been dis-
mileage rate."

Economy Hints

a penny earned.—

How to Chase Away Many Ills.

There are so many excellent remedies among the common,
inexpensive articles found in every kitchen pantry that we might save ourselves the expenditure of many dollars by using them and possibly gain even better results than
we can with high priced remedies.

Are you tired and nervous? Is your circulation below par, and are chilly sensations chasing each other up and down your spine? The best possible remedy is found on the pantry shelf in your can of ground mustard. Dissolve a tablespoonful of the mustard—
make it a generous one—and mix it with a tubful of hot water, then rest
in this bath for ten to twenty minutes. You will feel like a new individual, rested, refreshed, toned up generally and fit for a big day's work.

Do you feel rheumatic twinges that are elusive as to location but very apparent as to unpleasant sensations? Here is a mixture which has proved its worth in such cases times innumerable! Draw a tubful of hot water and have ready these ingredients, which must be thoroughly mixed and completely dissolved in the water before you get into the bath: One small cupful of sal soda, or ordinary washing soda,
one big tablespoonful of ground mustard,
one teaspoonful of laundry ammonia.

Now empty half the package of bran
you have on hand for bran bread into a piece of coarse muslin or double cheesecloth, and tie it up tightly, then soak it for a few minutes in the water and after you are in the tub squeeze
the bag of bran until every bit of the gluten is out of it. Remain in the bath from ten to twenty minutes. You will be likely to lose all the aches and pains and will come out of the bath
with your skin as soft as velvet.

Have you come home sunburned
from a long walk or ride? Grate up a raw potato and spread thickly on the reddened skin. It will take out the fire and relieve the irritation very quickly.

Has your skin a tendency to break
out in heat rashes when the hot weather becomes settled? Bicarbonate of soda, or, in other words, ordinary baking soda, dissolved in the bath will soon relieve the trouble. You can use a half pound of the soda in an ordinary tub of water or vary the quantity as seems best for your needs. It is absolutely harmless and can be used as frequently as desired and will be found to make a cooling and refreshing bath
at the close of a hot and humid day.

Is your liver out of order? Do you have trouble with your digestion and a generally sluggish condition of your system? Dissolve a half teaspoonful of ordinary table salt in a glass of water, either hot or cold, and drink
a half hour before breakfast, or at bedtime, if you prefer. This simple remedy acts like magic and has no ill effects afterward, as many medicines have.

FOR A GIFT.

How to Make Linen Covers For Card Tables.

The woman who plays cards or who has friends who play is interested in making linen covers for card tables.
These may be hemstitched or scalloped and either initialed or numbered on one side of the corner so that the mark shows on top of the table, but yet is not in the way of the players.

These initials or numbers are worked in hand embroidery and often require considerable labor. They should measure about three inches. On white linen the markings look better worked in white mercerized cotton, but on tan linen, which many people prefer because it does not soil so readily, colored embroidery gives a most artistic finish. Shades of deift blue, greens and golden browns all show off well
on the tan linen.

A pretty set prepared as a gift for a linen wedding anniversary consisted of four cloths marked 1, 2, 3 and 4. The numbers were quite large and fat and were filled in entirely with French knots of a rather light
deift blue outlined around the edge
with a darker thread. The cloths, which were tan, hemstitched, were folded into triangles with the embroidered numbers in the apex. Put together in a box, they formed a square (fitting into each other with the numbers toward the center); then they were held in place by deift ribbon meeting in the center with a bow of many loops.

How to Make a Palm Thrive.

Almost every housewife complains that it is impossible to keep a palm in the ordinary steam heated apartment.
The remedy lies in its watering.

Once a week the leaves should be sponged off with lukewarm water, to which a little milk has been added.

Once a week also the plant should be placed for two hours in enough
lukewarm water to cover the pot entirely. This is the right way to water palms, and it will be found that they thrive under the treatment.

How to Remove the Disfiguring Shine.

To treat, sponge the suit or dress with hot vinegar and press in the usual manner. No odor of vinegar will remain, all the shine caused by wear will disappear, and the garment
will look like new. The vinegar leaves no stain.

HOW TO MAKE HOME-MADE SCENTS.

Lavender Water.—Put into a bottle and shake well one-eighth of a pint of spirits of wine, one-
eighth of an ounce of oil of lavender and a quarter of a dram of essence of ambergris.

Eau de Cologne.—Half an ounce each of oils of lemon and bergamot, sixteenth of an ounce of oil of orange peel, quarter of a dram of oil of rosemary, twenty drops of essence of musk or am-bergris. Reduce this amount of ingredients in half a pint of rectified spirits of wine.

Numerous perfumes may be made by adding to a small quantity of rectified spirits of wine
oils of geranium, sandalwood,
rosemary or essence of berga-
mot, musk or ambergris, adding it drop by drop until the desired perfume is obtained.
These ingredients may be obtained from any drug store.

AMUSE THE KIDDIES.

How to Play the "Cut-out" Game With the Youngsters.

Mothers are often at their wits' end
to know what to do with convalescing children. During this trying time it takes much ingenuity to keep them interested.

One of the most pleasurable things
to boy and girl alike is the cut-out game. It is as old as the hills and yet has kept its newness and interest to this day. The boy will scorn the ordinary cut-out play, but give him first a blank book, then a catalogue from a sporting firm, a pair of scissors and a bottle of glue and tell him to furnish you a summer camp in the Adirondacks, such as he would like to live in;
then suggest that he fix up a scene in Canada in the winter time, with skiing, skating, and so on.

The way to interest the little chap
is to excite his imagination first. Describe to him in detail the interior,
then the exterior, of a camp in the woods; then tell him to cut out from the catalogue all the pictures which have anything to do with tent life.

These include guns, fishing rods, boats,
cooking utensils, cots, etc. Clothing for summer camping will probably be illustrated by pictures of men or women dressed in these garments. These figures may be grouped round a fire or standing in a canoe or climbing the mountains.

When the child has a number of illustrations cut out let him use his ingenuity to furnish the scene. Much can be done if the mother can draw a bit. In such a case she could outline on the first page the inside of a bare tent, to be furnished by the child.

On the second page could be the outside of the tent, with the mountain in the background and a lake at one side.

Further interest can be added to this game by giving the little one a set of crayons with which to color the pictures. Water colors are a joy to children if they can be arranged in such a way that the water will not spill. An excellent way to do this is to give the child a sewing board.

Where the board is cut out in a curve
it will fit into the body, and the paints
may be placed on its flat surface with no danger of upsetting them.

The wise mother saves her old magazines and catalogues for the time when her children may need them.

HANDY ABOUT THE HOUSE.

How to Use Adhesive Plaster in Unusual Ways.

Adhesive plaster is useful in many ways, but often we never think of it except for covering cuts or holding bandages in place. Here are some of the "unusual uses" to which it may be put: If a new shoe chafes at the heel put a piece of adhesive plaster at the top of the heel stiffening and before the foot. It will save the hosiery
if applied on the outside of the stocking when the hole first begins to make itself apparent. Use it to mend corsets
and put it over the ends of protruding steels and bones. A strip around a jelly glass cover will make it airtight.

Try strips put under the bottom of a rattan chair will save a repair bill.
Put a strip into the backs of children's overalls and they may then be put on without trouble and without a shoe
horn, which sometimes tears the corner. When rugs curl up at the corner strips of the adhesive plaster will cause them to lie flat. If you lose your thumb put a strip on the end of your finger. Use it to make secure your packages. If warm when applied it is sure to stick, no matter how much hard usage the package may have in transit.

WORTH KNOWING.

How to Preserve Fine China From Being Destroyed.

A housewife with an eye to preserving her dishes from destruction has devised a simple bumper to put about the faucet, so that dishes coming in contact with it in the sink will be uninjured.

She took a heel from an old rubber boot, cut a hole of the proper size in it with a chisel and hammer and put it around the end of the faucet, and now dishes and delicate glass tumblers can be knocked against it with perfect impunity. Winding a piece of rubber from an old rubber shoe around the faucet and tying it there would be just as effective.

To Wash a Greasy Bottle.

To wash a bottle or a glass that has contained oil use very hot coffee grounds. If the glass be badly incrusted wash it with a mixture of bichromate of potash and sulphuric acid in equal parts, being careful not to get a drop of this upon the fingers, as it is a powerful caustic. Then wash in several waters.

Bronzing Paint.

Every twenty-five square feet of average surface that is not too absorp-tive will require one ounce of bronze powder in liquid to coat it.

FACTORY EQUIPMENT.

Improved Methods Have Increased Efficiency and Output.

The manufacturer of today is looking for production first, last and all the time, and he hesitates at nothing which will increase his output and improve
the productive efficiency of his factory.
The development of the factory itself
has kept pace with the improved methods of manufacture, and it has changed
from a grimy, ill-lighted place with oily floors and smoky windows, to a clean,
well lighted and roomy building, with floors which are swept and cleansed daily. The change in machine tools is also very marked, heavier construction
throughout being the rule, giving greater rigidity and making possible the use of coarser feeds than was permissible on the lighter machines. Speeds and feeds can be rapidly changed to suit
any condition and the shifting of belts
has been very nearly eliminated.

Guards are provided for the safety of the operator and convenience of handling has received a great deal of attention. Individual motor drives are now obtainable on any of the modern machine tools, and progressive manufacturers are tending more and more to adopt this method of developing power. Without a doubt the time is not far distant when the up to date
factory will have entirely dispensed with cumbersome line shafting and countershafts and will have adopted
the individual motor drive to the exclusion of the old methods.

In connection with improved methods
of manufacture, we must not forget
the important factor of high speed
steel, which has revolutionized cutting speeds, and has thereby greatly increased production. As a matter of fact, the advent of high speed steel
has been one of the primary causes influencing the development of the modern machine tool.

Overhead traveling cranes and individual air or electric hoists are considered a necessity in the modern factory in order to handle the work to the best advantage, while motor driven shop trucks carrying heavy loads roll silently from one department to another in a fraction of the time formerly required when work was carted
around the shop by a laborer pulling or pushing a hand truck.—Engineering Magazine.

OZONE AIR PURIFIER.

Apparatus Designed For Use In Refrigerators and Theaters.

An ozone air purifier is being manufactured which has been used successfully in motion picture theaters and abattoir and meat market refrigerators. It is stated that fish can be kept three times longer in a refrigerator equipped with this apparatus than with ice alone, and the odors are practically eliminated.

The purifier, according to the Electrical World, is equipped with a rotary converter for transforming direct current to alternating current and a transformer which steps the voltage up to the high pressures required in this service. An electric fan is mounted within the transformer case to blow
the ozone out into the room. To eliminate the production of metallic oxides
due to the ozone coming in contact with the metals of the outfit, all wiring
is hermetically sealed in glass tubes. The design is also such as to prevent any heating, thereby avoiding
the production of nitrous oxides.

Safety Covering For Bevel Gears.
Bevel gears are the most dangerous,
because on account of their shape they are more difficult to protect. They are especially hard to safeguard where used on a shaft that extends both ways from the horizontal gear. The

Consists of a cylindrical piece of sheet metal, cut at an angle of forty-five degrees at both ends so as to present a triangular form. The hole for the cannot touch the hood, the latter being anchored with supports which are shaped to suit the conditions.

Millstone Production.

The production of millstones and related quarry products — burstones,
chasers and drag stones—in the United States in 1913 amounted to $56,103 in value, a decrease of $15,251 compared with the value in 1912. The production of millstones in this country in 1913 was nevertheless larger than in all but three years since 1888, when it was valued at $81,000. Millstones were produced in 1913 in Alabama,
New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

USURIOUS PROFIT.

In 1850 the proportion of the annual wealth created in the country by the joint efforts of labor and capital was one-fourth to labor and three-fourths to capital. Sixty years later the proportion had changed to less than one-fifth to labor and more than four-fifths to capital. This disproportion, to my mind, has much to do with our present discontent.

Usurious interest is no more,
but usurious profit has taken its place. The young man in assuming leadership must create
a public opinion and develop a moral sentiment against usurious profit.

I dare the prediction that the railroads of the country would welcome a permanent 5 or 6 per cent accumulative profit in exchange for their greater profit
and the doubt, risk and abuse
which come with it.

The doctrine of state rights
is seldom heralded save in opposition to needed reforms. The doctrine of state rights must be supplemented by the doctrine of state duties. If state rights are to be preserved the young men of tomorrow must take up the cry of state duties.

The old order of education has changed. It furnished a philosophy and taught man that happiness was not in his material surroundings, in position or power,
but in his own purposes and conduct. The humanities have been forgotten in the rush for success.—Vice President Thomas R.
Marshall.

THE PEOPLE'S ANTHEM.

Lord, from thy blessed throne,
Sorrow look down upon!
God save the poor!

Teach them true liberty,
Make them from tyrants free,
Let their homes happy be—
God save the poor!

Do the arms of wicked men

Do thou with mild restraint—
God save the poor!

Raise thou their lowliness,
Succor thou their distress,
Thou whom the meaneast bless—
God save the poor!

Give them stanch honesty,
Let their pride manly be—
God save the poor!

Help them to hold the right,
Give them both truth and might,
Lord of all life and light—
God save the poor!

Morris and His Furniture.

In "William Morris—His Work and Influence" is retold how the two friends, Burne-Jones and Morris, setting out to keep house together in the now historic rooms, 17 Red Lion square, found themselves confronted with the unendurable ugliness and vulgarity of mid-Victorian furniture. Says Mr. Clutton-Brock:

"Their rooms were to be furnished, and Morris could not find in any shop a single new table or chair that he could endure. This was not mere fastidiousness. To him vulgarity in furniture was, like vulgarity in manners, the expression of a wrong state of mind, and if his own furniture had been vulgar he would have felt as responsible for it as for his own manners. Therefore he designed furniture to please himself, making drawings that were carried out by a carpenter. Thus simply and naturally he began his business of 'poetic upholsterer.' . . . From the first he was not only an artist, but one who tried to make the world what he wished it to be, and beginning with armchairs, ended with society."

Theatrical Superstitions.

Paris, a city of theaters, is full of theatrical superstitions. Nearly every one associated with the theater has some sort of mascot. Thus, M. Fernand Samuel, manager of the Varietes, always wears an old and battered straw hat as a luck bringer at every first night. Mme. Ristori used to walk in a cemetery on the day when she had to appear in a new part, and Mlle. Brevet collects old horseshoes.

Mlle. Marie Garden always consults a clairvoyant before undertaking a new character, and Cora Laparcerie and Mme. Berthe Badt never dream of going on the stage without touching wood.

M. Henri Bernstein believes that there is some curious fetish in the name Zambou. He puts it in all his plays with different orthography. There is always a character called Zambou, Zambaut, Zambaux, Zambau—London Express.

Sound Deflection.

Sound does not always travel through the air in a straight line. It often happens that two zones of sound are separated by a zone of silence. In 1908 an explosion of dynamite on the railroad then building up the Jungfrau was heard in two different zones. The first extended through a radius of forty kilometers around the explosion. The other began at a distance of 140 kilometers, the sound being unheard in the intervening 100 kilometers. Similar phenomena had been observed elsewhere, and physicists tried to explain them by the reflexion of the sound waves from certain atmospheric strata. Professor Fujihara, who has studied such matters during volcanic eruptions in Japan, asserts now that these phenomena depend upon the direction of the wind in the middle strata of the atmosphere.

He Would Find Out.

Henry Irving in his early days once played a part which in the first act called for a dark stage. In this darkness he fought with an old earl, threw him heavily, and when he did not rise after the loud thud of his fall Irving would cry out:

"Great heavens, what have I done?"

One night he played the part in a small English town. A stage hand was very much impressed with the play, and to him the scenes quickly became real, so that when Irving reached the climax, felled the old earl to the ground and spoke the line "Great heavens, what have I done?" he was startled to hear the stage hand say in a loud voice:

"Strike a match and we'll have a look."—New York Globe.

Chamberlain and His Monocles.

While the late Joseph Chamberlain was crossing Palace yard one day some years ago he was accosted by an American girl with the cool request, "Mr. Chamberlain, please do give me your eyeglass for my cabinet at home."

It was at once handed to her, guard and all, so promptly that the curio hunter apparently felt some remorse and stammered, "Most likely I'm inconveniencing you." "Not at all," replied Mr. Chamberlain as he produced from his pocket a morocco case and took from it a spare monocle, which he screwed in position, and then went on his way, smiling.—London Express.

A Spade and an Acre.

I believe in a spade and an acre of ground. Who cuts a straight path to his own living by the help of God, in the sun and rain and sprouting grain, seems to me to be a universal workingman. He solves the problem of life, not for one, but for all men of sound body.—Emerson.

Pocket Mirrors.

From the twelfth to the fifteenth century small mirrors, carried in the pocket or attached to the girdle, were regarded as indispensable adjuncts to ladies' toilets. The pocket mirror was a circular plaque of polished metal fixed in a shallow box and covered with a lid.

Unselfish.

She—George, is that one of those cigars I gave you on your birthday? He—No; I'm saving those for my friends. She—You dear, self sacrificing, unselfish man!

Children.

Children are to be trained daily. To teach a child the right is to give him ideas; to train him is to reduce those ideas to practice.—H. W. Beecher.

The first hour in the morning is the rudder of the day.—Herbert.

Straw For Hats.

The greater part of the straw employed for making summer hats comes from Italy. To obtain suitable straw for this purpose the wheat is sown as thickly as possible in order that the growth of the plant may be impoverished as well as to produce a thin stalk.

The Italian wheat blooms at the beginning of June and is pulled up by the roots when the grain is half developed. Should it be allowed to remain in the ground a longer time the straw would become too

THE MAN OF A THOUSAND

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

They called him "Judge" Dale because in the far west you never "mistake" a man when you can call him "colonel" or "Judge." As James Dale looked more like a judge than a colonel, they called him as I have said. He was a mine owner, and when things went wrong he could make hot times for his engineers and foremen, but he didn't do it in a vulgar way. He was always a gentleman, even when he cussed the hardest. As a matter of fact, the judge's motto was "good form," and he carried it out in his clothes, his cigars, his dinners.

I have it on good authority that Judge Dale was not vulgarly startled when he received word from Denver that his handsome wife, to whom he had been married five years and who was visiting friends, had taken an old lover's arm and severed conjugal relations by eloping. He went through the day routine just the same for two or three days, and he had the same placid look and the same even voice as he called his head clerk into the private office and said:

"Thomas, I am going away for a few days, and you will take charge."

"Yes, sir," replied Thomas, and the next morning the judge was on his way to Denver. He picked up his clew there without having elbowed anything or soiled the polish of his shoes. He met friends and talked politics and real estate and mines, and, lighting a fresh cigar, he took a train for the east. Arriving in New York city, he paid a detective to locate the couple.

A steamer was sailing for the Mediterranean at the end of the fourth day, and when she departed the judge was one of her passengers. There were more than a hundred others, and as the weather was also stormy for the first two or three days out no one commented on the fact that the passenger who was registered as Major Davis stuck close to his cabin and had his meals brought to him by a steward. Judge Dale had changed his name, but he had no idea of changing his identity. There were laughter and conversation and a clatter of dishes as all the passengers finally gathered for dinner for the first time since leaving Sandy Hook. To the right of the captain sat one of the handsomest ladies and one of the finest looking gentlemen on the list, but taken altogether it was a grand array of wealth and culture. Dinner was fairly under way and the lady on the captain's right was beaming when she happened to cast her eyes down the table, and her face went as white as death in a second. Half a dozen people caught her words as she whispered to her supposed husband:

"John, there is the judge!"

The man looked, and the color went out of his cheeks and his jaw fell. Near the foot of the table sat the man who had taken a new name. He was cool and placid, and only the ghost of a smile hovered around his mouth. He looked the woman and the man full in the eyes for a minute, but made no sign of recognition.

"What is it?" asked the captain as "Mrs. Bemis" shuddered and gasped and seemed on the point of fainting.

"A sudden illness—heart trouble!" she stammered as she left the table for her stateroom.

At every meal Major Davis faced the guilty pair. Some of the passengers suspected nothing, but others insisted that there was a queer mystery about the major gave nothing away. It wouldn't have been good form. The woman avoided him as far as possible, but two or three times a day he found excuse to speak to her.

The steamer was to call at the Azores. One morning about 10 o'clock she made harbor, and it was given out aboard that she would not get away before midnight. Everybody was anxious for a brief run ashore—everybody but Mrs. Bemis. She feared that she might overexert and bring on another attack of heart trouble. Mr. Bemis had decided to stay with her when Major Davis hunted him out and said:

"I trust you will make one of a little party going ashore, and that you will bring your revolver along as I shall mine?"

"The party is—is—" began Mr. Bemis as his face blanched.

"A very exclusive one—just the two of us, you see. You have a pistol, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Ah, of course! We may find game, you know. Do you wish to speak to your wife first?"

"No."

"She's gone to lie down, eh? Well, let's be off."

The two engaged a boat as soon as landing and pulled away to a wooded cape, and two hours later a dead man was brought back in the boat. It was Mr. Bemis. He had accidentally shot himself while shooting at a bird.

When the accident became known and it was found that Mrs. Bemis was to go on with the ship instead of ashore to see her husband to his last resting place, there was an outcry over her want of feeling, but it did not reach her ears. She was in the stateroom under the doctor's care, and none of the passengers saw her again.

When the major had finished his work at the island he took a steamer for New York and home, and upon entering his office at the usual hour and in the usual way he said to his chief clerk:

"Thomas, I am back and feeling better. Bring me the balance sheets for the past four weeks."

A Point Gained From an Impostor

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

I began my public career by writing books; but, although I became favorably known as an author, my income from my literary work was not large. I presume I wrote for the few whose taste is refined. I entered the lecture field and found the work much easier and far more productive.

After having lectured in the principal cities of the United States during several successive seasons I turned my attention to foreign lands. One of my books was of the popular kind, being translated into five different languages. This gave me good audiences wherever I went, and my profits were correspondingly large.

Having made engagements to lecture in Australia, I took a steamer for Melbourne, but, owing to a break in the machinery of the vessel that bore me, did not arrive there till the day after the date announced for my lecture. On driving to my hotel I saw my name posted on the streets with the date of the lecture which had passed. I wondered what had been done about the matter.

On reaching my hotel the gentlemanly clerk swung the register around for me to enter my name, and I wrote Ambrose Pemberton in large, round letters with a flourish under the words, as was my habit. When the clerk wheeled the register back and read what I had written he looked up at me with a surprised expression on his face. I returned his gaze inquiringly, but he did not enlighten me as to the cause of his surprise. Calling a boy, he handed him a key and told him to show me to my room.

When I came down to dinner I took up an evening newspaper, and what was my astonishment to read a report of a lecture I had delivered the night before. Not only had I lectured, but I had made a profound impression on the audience.

It was evident that some one had been impersonating me. Either those whom I had instructed to make the necessary preparations for me—I had no regular manager at this time—had hired a man to give the lecture or some person had taken advantage of my name and, having all things at hand for the purpose, had impersonated me. Having eaten dinner hastily I went out into the general rounds for guests and others wherein the office was situated intending to make inquiries as to the person who had lectured in my name. On the way I passed three men, one of whom was introducing the other two:

"Mr. Williams, this is Mr. Pemberton, who won us all by his lecture last night."

I sank into an easy chair near by and, pretending to read the newspaper I had in my hand, listened.

"I was one of your audience, Mr. Pemberton," said Mr. Williams, "and have to thank you for a very agreeable evening. Some years ago I heard a man of your name lecture in Hongkong. Is he a relative of yours?"

"That fellow is an impostor. He goes about in places where I am known by reputation, but not in person and, taking advantage of the reputation, draws an audience and pockets the proceeds."

"That's a singular way of swindling. I never heard of such a thing before. I should think he would be an injury to you. His lecture was a very dull affair, I assure you."

Interesting as was this dialogue to me, I confess my amour propre was at this point somewhat ruffled. I controlled myself, however, and continued to keep my ears open.

"As I remember the fellow's lecture, which was on the pyramids of Egypt. It was as dry as the sands of the desert. Yours, on the contrary, was as fresh as a meadow in springtime."

"I never go into those details that are interesting only to bookworms," replied "Mr. Pemberton."

This latter remark decided me as to whether or not I should expose this real impostor. I determined to use the advice he had given me and pay no attention to him. In fact, I was indebted to him for an excellent point. The dialogue had informed me of what I required. I had been a close student of the subjects upon which I lectured, but I had relied too closely upon the body of my discourse, the information I conveyed, paying no attention to those artful accessories upon which the successful orator relies to catch and hold the attention of an audience of average intelligence. Following "Mr. Pemberton," I accosted him:

"Beg pardon, sir. I believe you are Mr. Pemberton, the lecturer. May I ask when and where you will lecture again? I am desirous of hearing you."

"Next week at Sydney."

"I am going to Sydney. I shall hear you."

The man looked at me suspiciously, but I passed on without saying anything more. I was advertised to lecture at Sydney the next week and resolved to go there incognito. I did so and attended the man's lecture, for he played the same game as at Melbourne.

He knew very little about his subject—only what he could read up hastily—but was full of humor and excellent in the use of pathos. From him I learned to introduce a quantum of light material into my lectures and from that time forward felt that my audiences were better pleased with my efforts, which gave me confidence, and the result was in all respects admirable.

A Singular Test

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

Miriam Wotherpoon had ideas of her own respecting love—that is, love between the sexes. She was at the proper age when women or men are apt to think a great deal of love and marriage.

Miss Wotherpoon had noticed the increasing number of divorces with concern and thought of a divorce in her own case with horror. Therefore when she became engaged to George Chandler she occupied herself thinking of the probabilities or possibilities of their separating after marriage till her mind got into a condition of semimonomania. Believing that the chief cause of divorces is a want of genuine love, she resolved upon testing both her lover and herself to discover whether the bond between them was or was not true love. Absence she considered the best test and resolved to live apart from her fiance for six months.

Chandler was a practical sort of fellow and was principally concerned in getting his affairs into shape to be married. When Miriam told him that she had resolved on a trip abroad to be absent a year he was astonished. When she gave her reasons he endeavored to dissuade her from her plan. Not succeeding, he finally gave his consent. When he saw her off on the steamer he said: "I love a better test than absence. Perhaps I shall apply it." Miriam begged him to tell her what it was, but he, knowing that she would not give over trying to get it out of him, refrained from mentioning it till just as the vessel was leaving the dock.

When Miriam had been gone six months Chandler wrote her that her absence had made no difference with his feelings toward her, and if she had experienced no diminution of her affection for him she would better return. She replied that she still felt the same toward him, but she had resolved at the time of her departure to remain away a year, and she thought their future happiness might be made more certain by her keeping her resolution.

It was about a month after this that a young American, Edward Treat, joined the party that Miss Wotherpoon traveled with. He seemed to take a desperate fancy to Miriam, and, since he was a very attractive fellow, she found his attentions agreeable. Love springs in the path of tourists of opposite sex like daisies in a clover field. When there is nothing to divert the mind of young persons from loving they are likely to love. Sightseeing—visiting ruins, works of art, gardens that have been cultivated for centuries—does not divert the mind from love. On the contrary, it encourages love.

Miriam, though she was somewhat troubled at a change she experienced within her, was confirmed in her opinion that she had been wise to apply her test. She began to doubt if her love for George Chandler was genuine, and one evening when floating in the moonlight on the bosom of Lake Como she was quite certain that it was not genuine. There are many degrees in the art of loving, and Treat was an adept. Besides, any girl who would fall to be impressed by the devotion of an attractive man on a moonlight night on the most beautiful lake in the world must have a heart of adamant.

Treat did not get to a proposal. Miriam warded him off from that. Though she was convinced that there was nothing about her love for George Chandler that might not be broken through, she was not ready to throw off the old and take on the new. Nevertheless she wrote her fiance a letter which indicated that she had not the faith in the endurance of her love for him that she had supposed. Within another week she wrote him asking if it would be convenient for him to come over.

Chandler sailed for Genoa as soon as he could make his arrangements to be absent and joined his fiancee at Milan. He found her in a very undisciplined condition. She had confessed her engagement with George to Treat, and the latter had ceased his attentions until she had decided to break with her fiance. She told Treat that Chandler was coming over and suggested that he go to Switzerland.

When George Chandler arrived Miriam was so glad to see him that new doubts arose in her bosom. She regretted that instead of sending for him she had not gone home to him. Nevertheless she felt that she had not stood the test, that she had proved her affection for him was not true blue, and she told him the whole story.

"I see nothing for me to do," he said, "but release you from our engagement."

"But I am not sure that I wish to be released."

"Miriam," he said, looking with a kindly expression into her eyes, "do you remember saying that I had a better test than yours?"

"Yes, I do."

"Well, I have applied it. Ned Treat is an old friend of mine. Hearing that he was coming aboard, I secured his promise to seek you and try to win you from me."

She gave him a look of astonishment, reproach, self abasement, then collapsed on his breast.

"It's all right," Chandler added. "I'll see during our married life that you don't fall under the influence of a fascinating man. If that won't keep us from the divorce you dread it is at least all I can do."

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

How to Buy Cheap and Nourishing Meat.

ROAST of beef costing $1 or $1.50 at the present time is not much. A hungry and healthy family will probably finish it in one meal. You can still enjoy good roast beef and surely for less money, only buy the right cut.

Nine out of ten customers ask for the first cuts of the rib roast. Of course, they are the most expensive cuts. The fifth, sixth and shoulder ribs are hardly in demand, and the butcher has a hard job selling them. But these end ribs or shoulder ribs of roast beef are not only considerably cheaper to buy, they are richer in nourishment and food value. When buying one of the three or four ribs of beef—say, for instance, weighing five pounds—you will find that you hardly have sufficient meat left after it is carefully trimmed and the bone taken out. The difference in price between the first cut on the rib and the last two cuts is at least 6 cents a pound, and when you ask for a shoulder rib roast ask the butcher to insert a piece of meat in the center of the roast or, if he has time, to lard it with thin pieces of fat.

Another good piece of meat for roast beef is the top sirloin, which is not so cheap, but it is recommended because it has no waste.

The next important item on the meat bill is chops—either lamb, pork or veal chops. Lamb chops, however, are the kind mostly demanded, and, of course, the demand is for loin and rib chops, the most expensive.

There is the same solution as with steaks—buy shoulder chops; they cost less and are sweeter. This same principle applied again to pork chops. The shoulder chops are very sweet and tender, and the butcher will sell them for legs, but very few people know about them.

FOR THE ILL.

How to Prepare Mutton Broth For a Sick Child.

Very often a doctor calls for mutton broth for a sick child, and this must be made separately and very carefully by the mother or nurse unless the cook happens to be familiar with the process, as not only is the meat to be perfectly fresh, but it needs special cooking. The easiest way to make it is to procure a pound of the neck of the young mutton. Tell the butcher what it is for, and he will know what to give you if he is reliable. It should be fresh cut and include the bones, but must not look stale or dark or have a heavy odor.

Put this in a quart glass preserving jar filled nearly to the top with cold water with a good sized pinch of salt. Put on the lid of the jar and stand it in an ordinary iron pot about half full of cold water and place the whole back on the stove, where it can come to a slow boil. Let the water in the pot simmer gently for three hours, replenishing it as it cooks away. This will steep the contents of the glass jar. Do not allow it to cook hard, and do not handle it roughly or stand it on a stone or other cold surface when at length it is ready to come off the fire, for any one of these things will crack the jar and spoil the contents.

Remove the lid from the jar and strain the contents into a bowl to cool. When cool, cover and place in the refrigerator for several hours until all the fat has risen. Skim the fat off carefully and heat the broth as needed. This amount will make two cupsful, which will probably be sufficient for one day.

It is better to prepare fresh daily for every day's use.

How to Clean Hardwood Furniture.

Hardwood furniture, contrary to popular belief, may be cleaned very nicely at home if the housewife cares to take the pains. A solution of two heaping tablespoonsful of soda to a quart of warm water must be made first. Then work may be begun on the furniture. The principal thing to remember in cleaning hard wood is that success is to be found only in cleaning a small place at a time and doing the work rapidly.

The mixture must be put on with a well-soaped toothbrush. The place must then be washed immediately with cold water and dried with a soft cloth. When one whole chair has been completed it should be rubbed with a mixture of two-thirds raw oil and one-third turpentine, with a little salt.

How to Save the Dining Table.

Folding asbestos sheets for use under the tablecloth are now selling for $2.75 and upward, according to size. In washable covers the prices begin at $3.75.

These are large enough for half a round table, but if you want square sheets they must be made to order. They are worth the cost because they save the necessity for mats and save also many an ugly stain from hot dishes on a polished table. Small asbestos mats for use on the bare table cost $8.10 and 15 cents apiece. These may be placed inside double cases of home manufacture scalloped round the edge.

HOW TO REMOVE GREASE SPOTS FROM A GOWN.

If you have a cloth gown which has been spotted with grease in any way, these spots can be removed by working at them from the back—in other words, from the wrong side of the dress material. Rub into each spot all the French chalk that it will retain and let it stay all night. Then lay blotting or tissue paper over the chalk and press with a warm iron. The grease will begin to draw out on to the blotter or tissue paper. This must be changed as the grease appears. The minute the grease is visible on the blotter or tissue paper the spotted section must be torn off and fresh, clean sections substituted.

When all of the grease has been drawn up, so that the blotter is no longer soiled when the iron is passed over the spots, then brush out all the chalk, and the spots will probably have disappeared. There may remain, however, on the right side a slight stain, which is not really grease, but only adherent dust. This should then be sponged off with ammonia, and it will be found all traces of grease will have vanished.

FOR THE FASTIDIOUS.

How to Use Some Toilet Articles With Success and Satisfaction.

For those who like to spray the hair with perfume, it is best to choose a delicate flavor like lily of the valley or violet, and though toilet waters may be had in the nonalcoholic grades, these are not practical for spraying the hair. Due allowance must be made for drying out, following the use of perfume in this way. Of course this spraying is always done with an ordinary atomizer. There is a new one to be had with a lock catch at the neck of the bottle, which absolutely prevents any leakage.

A toilet water in which America has never been surpassed is jasmine. It has a sweet, refreshing quality, which is very pleasant. It is not more costly than any other of the best toilet waters, and is individual in that it is unlike any other, taking the place of bath salt with many.

One positively becomes addicted to bath salts and powders. In these the American makes are quite as satisfactory as the imported. A new bath powder is pink in color. It softens the skin and has a most salutary effect, in addition to perfuming the water. Naturally bath powders are not to be added to the water in which one bathes, for the face, nor is pure alcohol to be used on the face except in the rarest instances of an exceptionally oily skin.

Even bath powders must be found which will not clash with odors already in use. The same care should be exercised in the selection of soap. Among the sensible woman's tubbing array can always be found pure white castle, but there are many lovely little round French cakes to lure one.

How many women know how to indulge in the luxurious sponge bath? It is so easily managed that once tried, it will never be forgotten and not often neglected. After the ordinary warm bath moisten a French wash cloth in fairly hot water and partially wring out. Then sprinkle with a goodly amount of your favorite toilet water, and rapidly draw over the body as if it were a towel.

HOW TO DODGE WASPS.

Lie Prone on Ground and Insects Will Fly By.

A man on his first trip into the wilds and marshes of an unknown country with the United States drainage engineers was struck by a unique method they have to escape from the attack of wasps and hornets. The country traversed is generally covered with thick undergrowth, and a path has to be cut through this all along the line. So when a big wasp nest is reached there is a very little warning, sometimes the axmen cutting into a big one with their machetes.

The person relating this experience was some sixty feet behind the axmen with the instrument when all at once the two axmen dropped in their tracks as if they had been struck by a thunderbolt. The man behind and the two chalmers did likewise. While they were lying prone on the grass and wet marsh they heard what sounded like bullets zooming over their heads. One after the other they came with angry zips. When things had quieted down a bit work was continued, and the new man found that to escape from wasps or hornets the thing to do was to drop instantly. The insects seem to be so mad that they fly in straight lines along a level and do not have time to hunt around for you.

It is said that hornets are not so prone to follow this rule as wasps, but the wasps never vary. Men have been stung to death by hornets, and horses and mules likewise.

How to Save on Gloves and Shoes.

An economical idea is to get all one's gloves and one's shoes of the same make, style and price, so when one of the pair gives out through accident you can replenish or remate the good one left with the surviving member of another pair. It sounds far too simple to be the great saving that it is, but if one tries it one will at once be addicted to the habit.

HATCH—NOERA

Dr. Royal Hatch of Wellesley and Miss Edith Frances Noera of Auburn-dale were married Wednesday afternoon at the Copley-Plaza, Boston.

The ceremony took place at 4 p. m. in the State suite. The Episcopal service was followed, Rev. Benjamin Marshall, professor of Biblical theology at Dartmouth, officiating, assisted by Rev. Lewis W. Hicks of the Wellesley Congregational Church.

Miss Hazel Noera, younger sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Andrew Marshall, brother of the officiating clergyman, was best man. The bride's gown was of white silk, with court train; she wore a veil and a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet.

Dr. and Mrs. Hatch left during the evening for a trip through the South. They will live permanently at Wellesley. Miss Noera's home has hitherto been at 145 Hillside avenue, Waterbury, Conn., though while at Wellesley College she has been staying at 43 Williston road, Auburn-dale.

Dr. Hatch is a native of Stratford, Vt., a graduate of Dartmouth College and of Harvard Medical School, of the latter in 1894. He belongs to the Phi Beta Kappa and D. K. E.

TRANSPARENCIES.

Pretty Window Pictures From Flowers, Ferns and Leaves.

ANYBODY CAN MAKE THEM.

Materials Are Inexpensive, and With a Little Taste and Skill Charming Decorative Souvenirs of Woodland Walks May Thus Be Made.

When you are out walking you often find beautiful leaves, ferns or delicate flowers that you wish you could keep. There is a way to do this that requires no special skill.

Smooth out each tiny leaflet of a fern so that its shape will be perfect. Press it between newspapers and change them daily for the first few days.

The materials that you will need to make transparencies are a sheet of Japanese paper, either gray or brown or a dull shade of green, a jar of paste and a pair of scissors.

After your fern is pressed you must decide upon the shape of the picture that you wish. For an oblong, which is perhaps the best, cut two pieces of the Japanese paper of the same size, large enough to cover the fern and leave a quarter of an inch margin around the four sides. Paste the fern lightly to one of these pieces of Japanese paper, being careful to make it lie perfectly flat and smooth. It is a good plan to use very little paste, just enough to make the fern stick fast to the paper.

On top of the fern is placed the second piece of Japanese paper, which is glued to the first piece of paper around the outer edge. Here you have your picture ready to be framed.

The next point to be decided is what color frame you will use. Perhaps you will decide on a dull gray, finding that it blends in very well with the delicate, tender green of the young fern. Again you cut two equal oblongs of the colored paper about two inches wider and longer than the oblongs of the Japanese paper. Cut out the centers of these oblongs, and the space thus made must be a quarter of an inch smaller, both in width and length, than the picture. You will notice that when you lay the frame on top of the picture it will cover the extra quarter of an inch of Japanese paper, or, in other words, the frame will overlap the picture a quarter of an inch. Paste the frame firmly to the picture around this center opening and then, turning the picture over, paste down the second piece of colored paper in the same way, so that your picture will be framed exactly alike on both sides.

Now, after the outer edges of the frame have been glued together the picture will be complete. By adding a bit of gray ribbon by which to hang it up your transparency is ready to be hung in the window.

You can make all sorts of transparencies, of all shapes and sizes, using dainty, delicately colored flowers or thin feathery grasses or some little leaves—anything, in fact, that is flat and can be pasted between the two pieces of transparent Japanese paper. Often ferns with just one gayly colored flower will make a beautiful transparency.

FOR SUN PARLORS.

The Chaise Lounge Convenient For an Afternoon Nap.

For the sun parlor there is no more appropriate and comfortable piece of furniture than a chaise lounge, where the afternoon nap can be taken in peace.

Chaises can be had at many prices. Sometimes their wide arms are supplied with rings just big enough to hold a glass of lemonade or iced tea. Sometimes they are in the form of baskets for magazines and books.

Sometimes they are wide to support your arms and hands. They are always comfortable. One of very good workmanship and material costs about $28.50, stained and fitted with cretonne cushions. This chair is made of willow.

A much cheaper chair is one of bamboo poles, bound with varnished split willow. This sort of chair costs only about $10 and is by no means so durable as the other. But it is comfortable and attractive.

IN MANY STYLES.

Attractive New Bags For Special Occasions.

Tan or bronze green crocheted silk square bags for opera or calling are drawn with silk cord and have rainbow silk long tassels at either side. They are lined with a soft satin to blend with the tassels.

White velvet bags hand painted with flowers in pastel colorings and with the background shaded to blend are new and are for opera or work bag use. They are drawn with gold cords for the former use and with ribbons to match the flowers for the latter purpose.

A Genius For Friendship.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer presents as a character in her story a botanist who gives the following advice to a young woman who is an amateur painter of ordinary ability:

"There are thousands of young women who can paint as well or better, but you are the one out of a thousand who has the gift of inspiring other people. You lift work from drudgery and vivify with your enthusiasm. The gift belongs only to a nature that is genuine, unspoiled and altogether unselfish. Stay yourself, child. Make the life work of many gladder and saner and truer because of their contact with you. You have a genius for friendship. Trust me, it is rarer than a genius for literature or art."

Questions In the Icebox.

The question of odors is a difficult one to deal with. So many housekeepers complain that, no matter how careful they may be, there is always a little odor in the refrigerator. Be careful of the food you put in. For instance, cucumbers have a very decided and penetrating odor, and there is nothing worse than a cantaloupe to "smell up" an icebox. If there is no cool closet or window box available, put the odorous foods into cracked ice for a short time before serving and they may be made deliciously cold.

Dark Colors For Fall.

Colors for fall and winter are to be dark, except in separate waists and evening gowns, says the Dry Goods Economist. Large use is made of black and of black and white. The colors for morning and afternoon wear are navy, tete de negre and green, with a strong representation of black.

In the separate waists and evening gowns tangerine, absinth, gold, maize, French blue, wistaria and empire green are represented.

Glass Covered Dollies.

Very attractive are the stands made of two thin rounds of glass with a lace dolly between and bound together with gold galloon. They are designed to put under the flower vase, so if it swells it will not damage the polished table beneath. They are dainty in appearance and may be had in two sizes.

WOMEN AND GOLF

Valuable Hints For Those Learning to Play the Game.

MASTERY OF RULES NEEDED.

Grounding In the Elements an Important Point For the Beginner—To Become Expert One Must Combine Theory With Technical Skill.

Women players of golf, especially beginners, are inclined to swing the club so far around that they are thrown off their balance and the club swings the woman instead of the woman the club, says a writer in the Outlook. This fault can be corrected by keeping a tight grip on the club at all times during the swing, as it is the loosened hold that allows the head of the club to drop too near the ground. In the drive, which requires the fullest swing of any of the strokes except perhaps the brassie shot, the shaft of the club at the top of the swing should not go beyond the horizontal.

There is another point that women players, even experienced ones, are apt to neglect, and that is the rules of the game. There have been many matches in which players have been disqualified through the unconscious disregard or breaking of some rule. A book of general rules can be purchased at any place where golf clubs are sold, and the local or ground rules of each club are printed on the score cards of that club, so there is no excuse for any one being in a state of ignorance.

If there is any short cut to learning golf it is through careful study of the reasons for everything. Once the principles of the strokes are mastered a few months of regular and intelligent practice will make any able-bodied woman a fair player, but years of practice without scientific knowledge of the game will bring very uncertain results.

A woman who seriously desires to become a really good player must curb her desire to go out and whack the ball along. Before she ever makes a complete round of the links she should study the peculiarities of each club, how to stand when using it, how to address the ball with it, how to swing it and what to expect of the ball once the stroke is made. After she has mastered these essentials and practiced with each club separately at suitable locations on the links she may place together all she has learned and play a whole game, but not before.

It is possible and perfectly permissible to wriggle the feet from side to side until they are comfortably and firmly settled. This may seem rather an unimportant suggestion, but it is next to impossible to keep the body from swaying either sideways or forward unless a firm base is established, and if the body sways the accuracy of the stroke is gone.

Women are rather inclined to walk up to the ball and lift it without taking the time to arrange themselves properly. After all, only a fraction of a minute is required to find the best possible position, and the habit once acquired becomes practically automatic.

DEATH OF MRS. GORDON

Mrs. Sarah Jane (Thompson) Gordon, widow of the Rev. William Gordon, for many years the presiding elder of the Methodist church in the Springfield district, died Friday in her 89th year at the home of her son, the Rev. William C. Gordon of 89 Grove street, Auburndale, with whom she had lived for the past 20 years.

Mrs. Gordon was born in Monson, Dec. 4, 1825. She leaves one son by a former marriage, Frank C. Willis, and a daughter, Mrs. Carrie Gordon Leland of West Acton, and the Rev. William C. Gordon. A brother, Joel H. Thompson of Pittsfield, and a sister, Mrs. Frank H. Stetson of Monson, also survive.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at her late home. The services, of a simple nature, were conducted by Rev. George S. Butters, pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, Auburndale. Interment followed in the family lot in the Brookfield Cemetery.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD

Miss Elizabeth P. Baury, the daughter of the late Rev. Alfred L. Baury and Mrs. Mary Catherine Baury, died last Sunday at her home on Washington street, Newton Lower Falls, from troubles incident to old age. Her father, who died over a half century ago, was for over a generation rector of St. Mary's Church. Miss Baury, who was 79 years of age, was born and always lived in the house in which she died.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon, with prayers at the house, after which the body was carried thru the garden attached to the estate, to the church on Concord street, the choir boys acting as an escort and the honorary pall bearers being Messrs. C. H. Spring, Edward Jennings, William P. Morse, Edward Parker and Chester C. Spring. Rev. Francis B. White, rector of the church, officiated and the body was interred in the family lot in the church yard.

A Double Mistake

By SARAH BAXTER

"Mr. Popenjoy!" announced a maid in a black uniform, white apron and faint cap to Miss Angela Rivers, who was standing before a mirror in her dressing room.

"Tell him I'll be down directly." Miss Rivers' mother, a widow, had some time before written her daughter that she had decided to marry again; that her fiancé was not by any means an old man, but full of life and spirits. He would be useful to them both. His name was Roger Popenjoy, and he was quite well off. The mother, who was not given to long letters, deemed this quite a sufficient explanation for the present and closed by saying that Mr. Popenjoy would be in the city where they lived and would call that very day to make the daughter's acquaintance.

When her toilet had been satisfactorily arranged Miss Rivers went downstairs to meet her future stepfather. She was surprised to see a man about thirty years old and with all the airs and graces of a man of the world. Her mother was only forty, but Angela never dreamed that she would marry a man ten years younger than herself. However, good breeding required that she show neither surprise, disappointment nor any other emotion. She advanced, extending her hand graciously. "Mamma wrote me that you would call today."

"Indeed, I expected to call soon, but I was not aware that there was any special appointment as to the date." "Have you been in the city long?" "Oh, yes, I live here."

Miss Rivers was surprised at this. She supposed that her mother had met her second fate in the city where she was visiting. The young lady would have liked to ask how long he had lived in the city of her home and why she had not met him in society, but this would have been to imply that he was not of the select social circle, the social circle to which the Riverses belonged.

"I've been living here only a month," he said. "I came here to go into business."

"In so short a time you could not have made many acquaintances. I shall have the pleasure of introducing you to some of my friends."

"Thank you very much." "Of course, considering the relationship, we shall have a great deal of freedom in going about together. We won't need a chaperon."

"Not at all." "Only I wouldn't like mother to be jealous." This was said archly and with a smile.

"I'm more afraid of father as to that." "Father?" "Yes, father," looking at her with surprise.

"How old is your father?" "How old is my father? Haven't you been told how old he is? Why, he's fifty-five."

"I confess I haven't heard anything about him."

"That's singular. I should have thought he would have told you everything."

"I haven't ever seen him." The young man looked at her with opening eyes.

"What kind of a match do you call this, anyway?" he asked presently. "I think it a very good match. So long as mamma is pleased I am."

"Oh, your mother's consent was necessary. Of course it was. How stupid of me!"

"I should think it was." At this moment there was a ring at the doorbell. The maid answered the summons and preceded a visitor into the drawing room, at the same time bearing a card on a salver. Miss Rivers took it up and looked at it wonderingly. On it was the name "Mr. Roger Popenjoy." While she was still staring at it an elderly gentleman entered.

"Morning, father," remarked the Mr. Popenjoy, who had been announced earlier.

"Morning, my boy. Happy to find you here. Present me to—"

"Your fiancée! How can that be necessary?" Miss Rivers looked on and listened with amazement. The last comer advanced toward her with outstretched hand and said cheerily:

"Your mother wrote you, I believe, that I would call."

Miss Rivers looked from one to the other of the two gentlemen for some moments before replying.

"Mamma wrote me that her fiancé, Mr. Popenjoy, would call, but she did not say that there were two fiancés. Can it be that mamma has forgotten she is no longer of an age to engage herself to two men at the same time?"

"Dad," cried the younger man, "didn't you write me to call on your fiancée, Miss Rivers?"

"I asked you to call on my fiancée, Mrs. Rivers."

"I see!" exclaimed Angela to the elder Popenjoy. "You are to be my stepfather. I wondered if mamma had lost her senses to engage herself to such a—"

"Pool!" supplied the younger man. "Not at all—one so much younger than herself."

"All's well that ends well," said Mr. Popenjoy, Sr. "You can go about with Miss Rivers very nicely—no chaperon needed, no?"

The two younger persons burst into a laugh.

A Telegraphic Flirtation

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE

I am, or, rather, was till lately, a woman telegraph operator. I was sitting at my operating table one night reading a novel to kill time—for I had little to do—when there came a night message from a distant station. As soon as it was finished the operator who sent it said good night to me. I replied that I wished I could say good night to all the world, for I was tired and sleepy and would like to go to bed. This resulted in a bit of conversation, in which my correspondent used certain masculine phrases that indicated him to be a man. But when I asked if he were a man he surprised me by saying that he was a woman. Next I was asked as to my sex, and, half suspecting that the operator was trying to humbug me, I replied that I was a man.

Then followed a period of love making, in which I as the man took the lead. I found it very difficult to make love as a man would, and the effort constituted the principal part of the amusement I derived from the affair. When I had nothing better to do I would write out certain lover-like phrases, then go over them, taking out the feminine give aways, substituting masculine phrases. These I would use in the corrected form the next time my lady called me up. I flattered myself that in this way I would avoid the appearance of being a woman.

My correspondent, if a man, which he claimed not to be, surely played the womanly part very well. He used very flowing language and expressed himself with such words as "dear," "that's just too funny for anything!" "Goodness gracious!" while I gave vent to "The dickens you say!" "Cut it out!" and "You be!"

While I had been led to believe my correspondent was a man, a constant use of feminine expressions altered my opinion. I did not believe any man could avoid making some slip that would give him away. I certainly found it almost impossible to avoid revealing myself as a woman and realizing that I could only do so in the manner I have indicated—that is, by writing my phrases and correcting them.

We exchanged, or pretended to exchange, photographs, though mine was one of my cousin, a handsome fellow about twenty-five. My correspondent was a comely girl with a spark of mischief in her eye. It was this expression that convinced me my correspondent was a girl. As I looked at her photograph it struck me that she was just the person to indulge in such a wise flirtation as was being carried on between us. I looked forward with pleasure to the day when we would meet and I should see the look of surprise on her face when she discovered her mistake.

To accomplish a meeting and apply a test at the same time I proposed that if my correspondent were coming my way he should call and see me. If he were really a man he would not scruple to do so. If she were a woman and believed me to be a man she would not come to see me, but expect me to come and see her. She stood the test. When I made the proposition she expressed herself as greatly surprised that I should do so, saying that she would not think of going to call on a man. She would, however, be happy to have the man call upon her.

If there was any doubt left in my mind that my operator was a woman this dispelled it. I apologized for what I called my thoughtlessness and said that I would take an early opportunity to call upon her. Nevertheless if it should turn out that some man had been representing himself as a woman it would be embarrassing for me, so I concluded to forego the pleasure of laughing at the girl and let the matter drop.

One morning a young man alighted from a train, came into the station, wrote a telegram and asked me to send it. The message was an unimportant one, simply stating that he would be in a certain place at a certain date. I counted the words, told him the price of the message, and he threw down the money. But he kept me at the window asking me questions about the town, how far it was to this place and that place and the running of trains. He was deferential, and I was not displeased to answer his questions. Finally I broke away to send his message, and as I did so he called to me:

"If the party is not found tell them to leave the message."

He went off uptown, but returned in about an hour with some flowers and, advancing to the window, laid them on the board over which messages are received and asked me if he might not send a telegram himself. Since he knew the Morse alphabet and thought he could stumble through one I assented, and, coming into the operating room, he sat down at the instrument and began to rattle off with the fluency of a professional telegrapher the name and address for the message. The address being the station of my correspondent, I picked up my ears.

The message read:

I have found the operator who has been pretending to be a man, and she is a woman, as was plain from the constant use of "Dear me." She is comely and attractive. I have brought her some flowers.

With that he turned with a sparkle in his eye to find me staring at him with cheeks red as the flowers he had brought me.

A BOY'S BIG GAME

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

I had the ill luck to get a thorn in my foot while hunting in the lion district of the Transvaal and was laid up at the house of a burgher name, Kloopenfeldt for a full week. The burgher had but one child, and he was a boy fourteen years old and named Carl.

I thought myself something of a hunter for big game, but I soon discovered that the boy, young as he was, knew a thing or two in that line.

I am going to tell you what he did on two occasions. The farmer had 100 head of cattle, which were turned out during the day on the rich grass and at night were herded in a strong pen. These cattle were exposed to one enemy by day and another by night. If a wandering rhinoceros came near the herd by day he would select an animal and charge him. Once in awhile one would be overtaken and killed, but in most circumstances, being more agile than the rhinoceros, the cattle made good their escape. The boy, Carl, had watched these performances for some time, and on the second day of my arrival he was to put a plan into execution. There was a big white ox among the cattle who had been chased several times, and he always ran for the pen when charged. He did not run in a straight line, but zigzagged, while the rhinoceros in pursuit never deviated from a straight course. At a particular spot the boy dug a pit. It was long and wide and deep, and it took him a week to complete it. Half a mile to the east of this pit was a thicket from which the rhinoceros had always charged. Just after noon on the second day the boy caught the white ox, and, tying a rope around his horns for bridle, he mounted him and rode away to the thicket. He was going to "draw" for a rhinoceros.

"If a rhinoceros charges the boy he may be overtaken and killed," I said to the parents.

"I have no fear for Carl," replied the father.

For half an hour the lad rode the ox along the edge of the thicket, and then a rhinoceros suddenly broke cover with a fierce snort. He was after the ox like a wild locomotive, and for the first two minutes my heart was in my mouth. Then the ox got his speed up and held his own, while the boy kept laughing and shouting. By means of the ropes young Carl held his "steed" straight for the pit, but just before reaching it he swerved to the left and passed it in safety. Not so with the "rhino," however. The big beast ran in a straight line with his head down. Instead of following the swerve of the ox he kept straight on, and in five seconds he had landed at the bottom of the pit.

The old gun was brought out, and the bullets were fired into the rhinoceros until he was dead, and he was then covered in. I tried to pat the boy on the back and magnify his deed, but I couldn't make him believe that he was a hero.

Each night as soon as the sun went down there was a great howling on all sides from hyenas and jackals, and an hour or two later the lions would begin to roar. On the second night of my stay I wounded one by firing from a kitchen window, and on the third I killed one that was prowling within thirty feet of the back door. The Boer was glad enough to have them disposed of, but yet he had an eye to business. A dead lion was worth only his skin, while a live one could be sold for $150 cash to the men supplying zoological gardens and menageries. I was asked not to do any more shooting, and on the afternoon of the fourth day the boy set about preparing a trap. The cattle pen was twelve feet high, constructed of stones, logs and thorn bushes. At one spot it was pulled down until about five feet high. On the inside was constructed a stout pen of stakes, having a length of ten feet and a breadth of five or six. The idea was that if a lion leaped the wall he would land in this pen. It was open at the top, however, and I pointed out to the boy that the lion would be no sooner in than out again.

"But you shall see how I will keep him in," he replied, and it was true that I soon did see and was amazed over it.

He constructed a sort of net of stakes and old telegraph wire, and this net was to be drawn over the top of the pen after the lion was caged. To draw it one must be inside the cattle pen. Just at midnight the boy took up his position in the pen among the cattle. An hour or so later we heard five different lions roaring at once. By and by I caught sight of two skulking around, and but for the remonstrances of the Boer I should have fired upon them. He wouldn't hear of it, and we had a big male lion full under our eye when the animal approached the opening and leaped the wall. The frightened cattle bellowed and rushed about in their terror, and it was fully ten minutes before we heard from Carl. Then he came out of the pen by the big gate and calmly informed us that the lion had been safely trapped. I tried again before I left to make the boy understand that he had exhibited the greatest bravery in doing what he did, but he modestly replied:

"But I had to be there to draw the net or the lion would have escaped."

And the father quietly added as he puffed away at his big pipe:

"He had to be, of course. You can't catch lions if you are in bed."

DEATH OF DEAN WALKER

Whose Mother Founded Missionary Home In Auburndale

Rev. Dean Augustus Walker, Ph. D., died Monday at his home, 105 Hantock street, Auburndale, in the fifty-fifth year of his age. He was born in Diabokir, Eastern Turkey, where his parents were missionaries of the American Board until the death of his father in 1866. After Dr. Walker was graduated from Yale College he taught for one year as professor of languages in Colorado College. He then took the course in the Yale Theological Seminary, giving special attention to the study of Semitic languages. From 1889 to 1892 he taught, part of the time as principal, in the preparatory department of the Syrian Protestant college at Beirut, Syria, and gave his spare time to the study of Arabic. From 1893 to 1895 he was fellow and extension lecturer at the University of Chicago, from which he received his Ph. D. degree in Semitics in 1895. From 1895 to 1900 he was professor of the English Bible and social sciences at Wells College in Aurora, N. Y. In 1901 he accepted a call to the Congregational Church at South West Harbor, Me., but in 1904 resigned his pastorate there on account of ill health. In 1908 he became pastor of the West Parish Church, at Andover and remained there until, on account of failing health, he again resigned and moved to Auburndale where he spent his last days in the home of his boyhood, the same house where his mother had founded the Walker Home for Missionary Children.

In 1896 he married, at Auburndale, Mary Lett Smith, daughter of Rev. William Spooner Smith. Beside his widow he is survived by a son, Wendell Augustus Walker, a brother, Frederic W. Walker of Brookline and two sisters, Harriet E. Walker of Brookline and Mrs. John P. Harding of Longmeadow.

Miss Winifred Leslie Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Adams of 367 Waltham street, West Newton, was united in marriage to Mr. George Robert Toney of West Newton, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Toney, on the evening of September 8th, at 8 o'clock, by the Rev. W. H. MacLaughlin of the Episcopal Church of Cambridge, Mass. The best man was Mr. George Ross Adams, brother of the bride, and the maid of honor, Miss Louise Newhall of Newton, Mass.

Miss Eunice Newhall beautifully rendered the March from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The bride was gown in a beautiful dress of broad crepe de chine with tulle of lace with pearl trimmings and veil of tulle with orange blossoms, and the bride's bouquet was lilies of the valley. The maid of honor's dress was pink satin and lace. The parlors were decorated with green and white.

The young couple have started on a wedding trip of ten days through the White Mountains in an automobile and after their return will reside for the present at the home of the bride's parents, where they will be at home to their friends after Oct. 15th.

HEARING ON SIX CENT FARES

Little Public Interest In This Important Matter Manifested This Week Before the Public Service Commission

The hearing before the Public Service Commission on the proposed increase in fares on the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway lines was resumed on Tuesday morning at the office of the Commission, 1 Beacon street, Boston.

There was apparently but little public interest in the matter outside of the company's officers and the attorneys for the various municipalities in which the company operates. Mr. Daniel O'Connell was the only citizen of Newton noted in the score or more of persons present.

Mr. A. A. Ballantyne, the attorney for the company, presented figures as to the increase in revenue expected from the proposed raise, 1914 to June 30, 1915, the single fares yielding an estimated revenue of $66,179, the abolition of 50 ride tickets in Wellesley about $8,962, the one cent transfer in Newton & Waltham $2506 and the transfer in Lexington at $2129, a total of $79,778.

Mr. Ballantyne gave a brief resume of the case put in last August by the company stating that the Company had a net operating deficit of some $265,000, that it had paid but 4% for the past two years in dividends, that the company faced an increase of $80,000 in extraordinary expenses due to necessary track repairs, chestnut poles, lower steps, that the proposed depreciation item requested by the Commission would require $70,000 additional, that the recent increase in wages caused a payment of $30,000 in back pay, and would require $37,000 more for the balance of the present year and changes in hours of labor would cost some $8000. The company has no way of meeting these increases except by increasing fares, and this petition is only a part of a general movement taking place all over the country.

Mr. H. H. Bond of Waltham presented a petition asking that in considering this matter the Commission also take up again the question of the one cent transfer now in force.

Mr. George A. Sweetser, counsel for Wellesley, then asked that the Commission grant a continuance until he could present the testimony of an expert engineer, who would return until Sept. 14, and after some nagging the Commission agreed to hear this person on Sept. 17. Mr. Sweetser said this testimony would be in line of some criticism of present operating costs.

Mr. Sweetser said he hoped to show that the public ought not to pay a fare in order to yield a dividend on present stock because the present value of the property does not equal the face value of the stock and would endeavor to show just what the real value of the property on which dividends ought to be paid. Some operating costs he thought were high and the net result would be a total which would not authorize the proposed increase. Mr. Sweetser also intimated that the 5 cent restriction in the original location might still be maintained and he might take it to court for settlement. He did not claim that the stock was watered or that money represented was not actually put into this property. He did claim a depreciation in values and that certain property was not now in use. He believed that when the Newton & Boston property was taken over with a deficit of $280,000, that the M. & B. Co.

issued its stock for something which did not exist, and claimed that this transaction would never have taken place had the Newton & Boston been owned by persons not interested in the M. & B. Co.

General Manager George M. Cox then testified that the Company obtained its power from the Edison Co. under a ten year contract made in 1909 at a cost of .9174 per kilowatt, and a yearly expense of some $183,000. The entire system being operated by Edison power. That the Company had an unused power plant at So. Framingham carried at $95,000, one at Newton at $158,000 and one at Lexington at $141,000. These could all be used again if considerable repairs were made. He also testified that when the Natick & Cohasset Co. was taken over it had a surplus of $17,000 and had paid in 1892 a dividend of 53%. This statement caused Chairman McLeod to remark "those were the happy days." In discussing the power question Mr. Cox stated that the Edison Co. penalized them whenever they used excess power at the rate of 20 cents per kilowatt and that his company had arrangements with the Elevated to supply some excess power needed at certain times at Lake street at a rate of two cents. The Company had paid the Edison Co. some $9600 in penalties in 1914.

Wednesday morning was taken up by the examination of General Manager Cox by Selectman Moseley of Needham and Town Counsel Burns of Natick. Mr. Moseley sought to learn from Mr. Cox why there were differences of several thousand dollars in the cost of electrical current in the years of 1900 to 1906. Mr. Cox said that the differences were due to repairs and the cost of coal.

There was a lengthy discussion between Chairman McLeod of the Commission and Attorney Ballantyne as to why the company kept the machinery in the unused power stations at Lexington and Newton Centre.

"There is a question as to whether it is proper to allow the company to keep old and inadequate machinery idle in power stations which are not producing current and to charge its idleness to the passengers," said Chairman McLeod.

Attorney Ballantyne stated that the reason for keeping the machinery in the power stations was for emergency and obtaining a lower rate for the current which the company buys from the Edison Co. Chairman McLeod said that he could not see any reason why the rate of fare should depend on any property which is not in use. Chairman McLeod suggested that the Middlesex & Boston secure figures on what the unused machinery could be sold for.

Mr. Moseley stated to the Commission that the floating debt of $453,000, which had accumulated in the past 20 years, demonstrated that the road had not been managed in a businesslike way, but that the passengers should not be called upon to pay for improper management.

Attorney Ballantyne answered that the debt was an honest one, and that the community owes the Middlesex & Boston a debt.

Chairman McLeod said that the Newton Street railroad had had a 5 cent fare before the consolidation and that he questioned obliging the people along the line of the original Newton Street line to pay for a deficit on the Middlesex & Boston.

Attorney Ballantyne said that the Middlesex & Boston had not been a bonanza for anybody.

Attorney Bond, addressing the Commission stated that the lines which were not paying propositions before the consolidation are not paying lines today, and that the original Newton Street Railway should not be allowed Middlesex & Boston system. He said that there was no community interest between Waltham and Billerica or many other towns served by the Middlesex & Boston.

Mr. Cox, in a reply to a question, said that he believed the physical condition of the Middlesex & Boston compared favorably with that of any other railroad line in Massachusetts outside of Boston.

Mr. Bond stated to the Commission that the reports of the original Newton Street Railroad showed that it was paying a dividend of 5 percent for many years and that since the consolidation the original Newton Street Railroad had paid 3/4 of the entire dividend of the Middlesex & Boston system.

In examining General Manager Geo. M. Cox, Selectman Moseley of Needham brought out that the company expected to receive in addition to its present revenue $90,000 annually if the fare increase is granted, but that only $37,000 would be used to pay the increased wages of its employees. The rest of the money, Mr. Cox said, was needed for repairs. Mr. Moseley introduced a circular issued by Lee, Higginson & Co. in connection with a sale of bonds for the Middlesex & Boston in which appeared a letter signed by President James L. Richards written on Jan. 29, 1912, in which Mr. Richards said: "The physical condition of the road is maintained at the highest point of efficiency."

An appraisal of the property of the company made in 1912 was submitted showing a valuation of $3,127,718.16 on a book value of $3,613,025.45, a depreciation of about $485,000.

EDITORIAL

The testimony so far given at the hearing on the proposed gas main
seems to me to avoid the real vital point, so far as the interests of Newton and Waltham are concerned.
While it is interesting to learn of the amount of property lying idle on account of changes in operation, every fair minded man would admit that that property actually represented money paid by the stockholders, and unless
it could be charged off to depreciation,
there is some ground for the argument that the investment should still yield a return.

To my mind the only argument
worth while from a strictly local standpoint should be directed at a separation of the present street railway properties into their former units,
so that residents of this city should not be compelled to make up deficits in operating street railways in Lexington. There would seem to be no more reason why a Lexington deficit
should be paid by Newton than a similar deficit in the Berkshire hills.

While it is a trifle early to attempt to summarize the matter, it is quite apparent that unless the above argument is strongly presented, the facts
point to the granting of the six cent
fare by the Commission.

This school year will inaugurate
the administration of a new superintendent who comes to this city with the highest reputation for efficiency.
Mr. Wheeler will have the hearty support of every citizen, if he can continue the splendid business administration of former Supt. Spaulding, combined with a more reasonable course regarding the quantity, and possibly the quality of education to be furnished at public expense.

This week marks the return of the greater portion of our people who have been away during the summer months.
The opening of the schools next Monday, and the resumption of normal business activities will be welcomed
by those of us who have been compelled to remain in their city during this vacation period.

PILLMAN-SIMONDS

A quiet home wedding took place
this week on Tuesday evening at All-ston, when Miss Florence Simonds became the bride of Mr. F. Vernon Pillman of Newtonville. The bride's home on Empire street was attractively decorated for the occasion with autumn flowers, and the ceremony
was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev.
James Watson Campbell, D. D., pastor of the Newtonville Methodist Church.

The bride was gowned in white bro-cadee charmeuse, with trimmings of duchesse lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and mignonette. She was attended by Miss Cushman of Middleboro, as maid of honor.

The best man was Mr. Ralph Lowell
of Providence, a nephew of the bride.
As the bridal party entered the Lohengrin wedding march was played by Miss Ruth Pillman of Newtonville.
On their return from a wedding trip
Mr. and Mrs. Pillman will reside in Newtonville.

DEATH OF MRS. TODD

Mrs. Annie E. Todd passed away
last week on Friday at her home, 711 Washington street, Brighton, after a short period of failing health. She was in her 71st year, and was the widow of the late Charles R. Todd.
The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs.
Edwin P. Brown on Humeval Hill.

An impressive service was conducted at 2 o'clock by Rev. Laurens Mac-Lure, D. D., rector of Grace Church.

The selections, "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," were rendered by a male quartet.

The burial was in the family lot
at Forest Hills Cemetery.

Mrs. Todd is survived by two sons,
Mr. George Todd of Ashmont, and Mr.
Albert W. Todd of Newton, and three daughters, Mrs. Edwin P. Brown, Mrs.
Howard Norton and Miss Ethel Todd of Newton.

Modern Life in Far North.

Dawson, the Yukon capital, and Fairbanks, its near Alaskan neighbor, are,
next to Hammerfest, in Norway, the farthest-north cities in the world, and at the latitudes of 63 and 65 have such comfortable appointments as electric lights, daily newspapers and pipe organs.

Economy
Hints

A penny saved is
a penny earned.— Benjamin Franklin.

THE delight of camp life lies in its utter freedom and the reduction of all things to their utmost simplicity. This very simplicity calls for much common sense
in planning the kitchen arrangements.
For the recipes of ordinary life are not practical without markets near at hand.

It is in most instances possible to procure chickens, fresh eggs and milk,
which, of course, make the menu less monotonous than if one is reduced to evaporated and condensed milk and dried eggs, though much that is edible may be contrived even with these supplies.

Fish is a staple of camp menus, for usually the camp is near water. In preparing fish there are several general rules to follow. First, olive oil is best to fry them in, and, next to oil, butter;
second, only large fish should be boiled;
third, any fish that are to be fried must be wiped dry or they will absorb too much grease, and the fat must be very hot before the fish are put in; fourth,
if the fish have been caught in muddy water rub salt on the backbone and put them in strong brine for an hour
or more before cooking.

In the autumn birds will probably be a foremost part of the menu, and to roast them with their feathers on is
the easiest and the primitive way.
Open the bird as usual and draw it;
then cover it with wet clay, bury it
in hot coals and in forty minutes take
it from the coals and peel off the clay,
and the feathers and skin will come
also. This is a guide's method.

Eggs may be roasted in the coals or,
rather, in hot ashes. Cover them and keep enough fire on top to insure steady heat, and in six minutes they will be done.

Soup for cold days is more than acceptable. Potato soup is at once nourishing and delicious. Peel and cut into slices a pound of potatoes. Chop up two onions and put all into a saucepan with an ounce of fat. Cook for five minutes with a lid over the pan;
then add a pint of water and boil gently until all are reduced to a pulp.
Add half an ounce of washed sage and a pint of milk. Cook again until the sage is transparent; then season with pepper and salt.

Fruits, except berries, are almost unknown in the average camp. Lemons must be provided, and dried fruits make many good things. Where fresh berries or other fruits are at hand a sauce made from them is often a substitute for milk and sugar. Boil the fresh fruit until it is pulp and can be mashed. Press it through cheesecloth, sweeten according to taste, and when it is to be served heat it and, if desired, add spices.

This sauce is excellent on rosgod, a favorite dish of the Swedes and Norwegians. To make it take one and a half quarts of water and add one and a half quarts of acid fruit juice and two heaping cups of sugar. Let these ingredients come to a boil with a stick of cinnamon tied in cheese-
cloth, which is, of course, taken out later. While the mixture is boiling stir in slowly so that it will not be lumpy a pound of soaked sage or a pound and a half of arrowroot; then boil it for fifteen minutes and turn into cups to cool and form.

Air balls are another good dessert.
Make a dough as for cream of tartar
biscuits and cut in small squares.
Fry these in exceedingly hot fat like doughnuts, lay them on paper to drain
off the grease, then dip them in hot simmered molasses. Serve them hot.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

How to Make Two Dresses Look Like Four.

Last summer a clever girl with very few pennies made two dresses look like four, which is, you will admit,
quite an accomplishment. There is no reason why her example cannot be followed this year.

She bought materials for two rattle
dresses, one of blue and one white.
She made them exactly alike, with belted Russian coats with rather short tunics. The blue coat had a white collar and cuffs, and the white coat had a blue collar and cuffs. The blue skirt was a little more elaborate than the white, as it was meant for church wear.

When she wanted a variety she changed coats, wearing the blue coat
with the white skirt and vice versa.
With the addition of a black straw shade hat decorated with a wreath of field flowers and a stiff white walking hat with a black quilt, she was either very dressy or quite tailor made. The coats required no blouse beneath and so were not too warm for even very hot days, but either skirt could be worn with a pretty lingerie blouse if she so desired.

How to Remove Superfluous Hair.

The French method of removing superfluous hair consists of applying peroxide and ammonia to the offending skin on alternate nights. The treatment will have to be continued for several months before it will destroy the hair, but there will be no danger of the hair ever returning.

HOW TO MAKE COVER FOR TELEPHONE BOOK.

A very convenient and attractive cover may be made for the telephone directory by sewing
dark colored burlap or tapestry
over pieces of pasteboard, the offending paper covers of the book
being tucked inside enveloped straps of the fabric on the inner sides of the manufactured cover.
A two inch strip of the material left between the two stiff boards will fit over the back of the book, and tapes sewed to the ends of these strips and fastened
within the book, about its center, will keep the directory securely within its artistically colored jacket. If snap buttons are sewed to the ends of the tapes
the book will close more flatly than if the tapes are tied in a bowknot.

PACKING HINT.

How to Hang Away and Store Various Garments.

Heavy outdoor garments should be hung on a well padded coat hanger,
with the weight entirely suspended
from the shoulders. One piece dresses should be hung in the same way, held with a light, loose stitch taken in the shoulders of the garment. The sleeves of dresses and blouses which are to be hung in wardrobes and closets should be stuffed with tissue paper.

Light colored dresses that are apt to fade and soil readily should be protected from all danger of dust by being hung in fitted bags of calico or muslin,
which slip on over the hanger and are rounded in shape at the top to fit the shoulder or curve line of the hanger.
These coverings are made long and deep, reaching several inches below the lower edge of the dress and button at the top over the hanger. Blue tissue paper should always be placed between packed away white materials that are not washable, such as fine lace, chiffon,
silk and satin.

Waists and dresses of chiffon and similar materials need most careful packing. Not only should such garments be thoroughly padded to hold their shape, but flat pieces of tissue paper should also be laid over each fold
or fullness in the material after creas-
ing or turning it to fit into the space.

When packing no creases should ever be left without padding, or the creases will become deep and so marked in the material that it is apt to become cut or to wear out at this point.
Stuff the sleeves of coats with tissue paper. Lay creased pads of the tissue paper on the inside of the coat down
each side. Put more padding in the bust. Fold the arms over the front of the coat. If it is necessary to bend
the sleeves do so between the elbows and cuffs. Under the crease lay padding, over which fold the sleeve. If the skirt of the coat is long it should be folded over from the back to the front to fit the coat into the straight line at the sides. In these creases lay more padding.

The hat which is to be packed away
at the end of the season should first
be very carefully cleaned and freed
from all dust both in the hat itself and in the trimming. It is better to rip off the trimming, as it will probably not be used in the same way next season.
If it is ribbon or silk roll it carefully
on stiff paper. The crown of the hat should be stuffed out with tissue paper
and the brim fastened as flat and smooth as possible.

The important thing in the packing
and keeping of furs is thorough cleanliness. They should be carefully shaken and exposed to the sun and fresh air for at least twenty-four hours before packing away. Wrap them in dark brown paper and hang in a dark,
cool place. They should never be packed tightly, as this flattens down the hair and makes it hard to raise. It is better to hang them up.

Scarfs and coats should be hung upon hangers, covered with paper and then
sewed into light muslin or linen bags.
Muffs should be hung upon a rod, held
by heavy cords at each end and stuffed out, and should never be laid together
flatly with the weight of one muff
pressing down upon another.

How to Take Proper Care of Your Shoes and Boots.

To prevent shoes from creaking put
a small quantity of linseed oil on a plate or shallow pan and stand the sole of the shoe in it for a few hours.
The creak will disappear, and the shoe
will also last longer on account of this treatment. To soften leather there is nothing so penetrating and softening as neatsfoot oil. It will enter where other oils will not make a surface impression.

By proper care you can make rubber overshoes last much longer. After wearing them, while they are still damp, do not place them near a fire
to dry, as the heat will crack and draw them up. If they are cut they can be neatly mended with a piece of thin rubber placed on the inside with a little glue, such as is used for bicycle tires. When they begin to look old and rusty they may be restored to the original black by applying a little vasoline or sweet oil with a flannel
cloth. Always keep them in a cool, dry place.

If rubber boots wear out at the feet
they may still be made quite useful
by slipping a pair of snug fitting rubber shoes over them. To dry rubber boots quickly put a couple of quarts of oats in a baking pan and heat in the oven. When very hot pour into the boots and let stand until they are dry, which will be in about an hour.

THE YAQUIS' REVENGE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

Every American of us at the silver mines had turned out with the Mexican soldiery to help drive the Yaquis back to their hiding place in the mountains. It was a case of self preservation with us. When the Yaqui was on a raid he made no difference between the property or scalp of an American and a Mexican. He owned the land before Cortez appeared. The process of weeding him out is still going on.

And so when the news came in that the Yaquis had taken the warpath and killed or driven off the men at the Solta mine above us we turned out with the 300 soldiers sent up to meet the war party and drive it back.

For three days we fought the Yaquis before we got them on the retreat. It was not enough, however, that we had saved the big mines and 500 almost defenseless people. Orders came to the colonel to push on after the retreating Indians and hold them up if possible and exterminate them. We went with them to see the thing through and because they had need of our rifles and of our sharpshooting. Once among the mountains the soldiers could no longer move in a body. There was constant fighting, but the Indians were continually forced back. By and by they had reached the women and children and their stronghold, and the Mexican colonel rubbed his hands and laughed and said:

"We have got them penned up at last, and not one shall escape. It is the best show we have had for half a century to exterminate them."

The stronghold of the Indians was a series of cliffs and caves in the face of the mountain. There was but one path leading to it. That wound over a number of ridges and then dipped down into a basin which had a circumference of about half a mile. The colonel's plan was to advance the whole force into this basin when night fell, and taking cover behind the bowlders lying thickly beneath the caves, we should be ready at daylight to begin the work of extermination. While a portion of the troops kept up a fire to prevent the Yaquis from leaving their caves another portion would collect fuel and smoke them to death. We were not averse to dealing the Indians a hard blow and one to be remembered, but we did not go in for the extermination of a thousand souls at once, more than half of whom were women and children.

"Gentlemen, you are not under my command," said the colonel as he rubbed his hands and smiled, "and you will therefore decide for yourselves. When darkness comes my command will march down into the basin. For fifteen years I have been hunting the Yaquis. For fifteen years I have been hoping for just this chance."

They could not charge us with cowardice, but when our decision not to support them in a massacre was made known there were smiles and expressions of contempt.

An hour after dark the soldiers left us and went marching in single file down into the basin. I do not believe the first man had yet descended into the basin when we suddenly caught sight of a signal fire to the right.

The Yaquis were not to be surprised. During the next hour the whole side of the mountain showed signals at intervals, and then there was an interval of three hours, during which not a light was to be seen. At midnight from the center of the mountain a signal fire suddenly blazed out. It did not last more than a minute and was followed by a noise none of us could make out. It was like the roaring of a gale in a narrow gorge of the mountains, and we had been listening to it for perhaps ten minutes when from the dark basin beneath us arose such a cry as few men ever heard.

"In the name of God, what can it be?" asked each man of his comrade, but no one could answer. Down there in the midnight blackness some terrible tragedy was being enacted, but we must wait for daylight to solve it. The roaring, rushing sound came to us after the scream died away, but more softly than at first. From that hour till dawn came there was no signaling, no noise, nothing to prove that there was life in the mountains beyond our little band. The peaks of the mountains stood out first. Then we followed the dawn down till our eyes rested on the caves. In front of them were hundreds of people, but they were standing quiet and peering down into the basin. In another minute daylight had crept down there, and we looked and cried aloud in horror. The bottom of the basin, as we saw it the evening before, had been covered with scrub and grass. It was a basin still, but the bottom was hidden under ten, twenty, thirty feet of water. There was no outlet, and we could see the waters rushing and swirling round and round as if to find one. And borne on the rush were the bodies of the dead—of the 231 men who had left us a few hours before. Not one had escaped. High up on their side of the mountain the Yaquis had dammed a spring or rivulet and stored up the waters for just such an emergency. At midnight they had let the flood loose, and it had come tearing down at lightning speed to overwhelm the enemy, caught like rats in a trap. As we turned away in our horror to make our way down the mountains the Yaquis raised their voices in one long shout of exultation and then were silent. They had reaped their vengeance and were satisfied to let us depart in peace.

HER FATHER

By F. A. MITCHEL

A ring at the telephone. St. Luke's hospital.

"I would like to speak to Miss Manners."

"Who is it, please?"

"Her father."

"Hold the wire."

Then the person who had answered the call notified the nurse, who went to the telephone booth.

"Is it you, sweetheart?" asked a man's voice.

"Yes, dear."

"I couldn't get through the morning without calling you up and having a word with you."

"I hoped you would."

"I've made arrangements to go in with Dr. Clarke Emerson, the big surgeon, and he is to pay me $100 a month from the start. That will enable us to be married. You can leave that confounded hospital and stop ramming thermometers in persons' mouths and noting their heartbeats. All your own heartbeats will belong to me."

"I'm so glad."

Miss Manners' father kept her at the telephone some twenty minutes, when she resumed her duties. In the afternoon she was assisting at an important operation when there was another call for her. Mrs. Irwin, the matron, went to the phone.

"Who is it wishes to speak with Miss Manners?" she asked.

"Oh, Mr. Manners, your daughter is assisting at a critical operation. Is it anything important?"

"Oh, no. I'll call her up later. Good-by." There was a click, then silence. The matron thought the voice sounded familiar to her, but she did not remember to have seen Mr. Manners.

The next day Miss Manners was called up by her father twice, and both times Mrs. Irwin was aware of the fact. She wondered what the nurse's father had to say to her so often. At the second call the matron went to the telephone and asked:

"Well, what is it?"

Miss Manners' father recognized Mrs. Irwin's voice, though she did not recognize his.

"Will you kindly tell Miss Manners that her uncle is dead?" was the reply.

"I'll announce the fact to her immediately."

"Thank you very much." Click! For a week Miss Manners' father kept calling her up twice a day or oftener. The matron, feeling that the nurse's time should be devoted to her patients instead of her father, found his address in the telephone book and called him up one evening after dinner.

"Is this Mr. Manners?"

"Yes."

"I'm the matron of St. Luke's hospital. I trust you won't take it amiss if I suggest that you refrain from calling up your daughter on the phone so often. It keeps her from her duties."

"I have never called my daughter on the phone in my life."

"You haven't?"

"No."

Mrs. Irwin was mystified. She was convinced that Mr. Manners was telling the truth. She said nothing, but when a few hours later there was a call for Miss Manners she went to the phone on an upper floor and listened.

"Is that you, Lucy, dear?"

"Yes, Phil."

The voice sounded more familiar to the matron than ever, and the name Phil gave her a clew. Dr. Philip Auchmuty, who upon graduating at a medical college had been house surgeon at the hospital and had recently resigned. Mrs. Irwin mentally put one and one together, and the result was two: the doctor and the nurse in a love affair. She listened to a conversation which made her aged heart envious, and when it was ended she called up Dr. Auchmuty and asked him to come to the hospital. She wished to see him about one of the nurses who had been ailing, but was getting better, and the doctor's opinion was wanted as to whether she had better be discharged. He called a little later, and the matron asked him into a private parlor.

"Doctor," she said, "the patient about whom I wish to consult you is Miss Manners. She's troubled with a mania of running to the telephone several times a day to chat with her father. This takes up so much of her time that I am thinking of discharging her."

The doctor winced, but kept a stiff upper lip. "If Miss Manners' father calls her up how can she help it?" he said.

"By refusing to go to the phone when he calls."

"What! Refuse to answer to her own father?"

"Come, come, doctor! I heard your last conversation on the phone with Miss Manners. Are you engaged to her or married to her?"

"Married," replied the doctor after some hesitation. "Being aware that you would not retain her as a married woman we concluded to keep our wedding secret till I got settled in my profession."

"Then you advise your wife's discharge?"

"I do. I am to be Dr. Clarke Emerson's assistant. I don't think I need trouble you to keep Mrs. Auchmuty any longer."

Mrs. Irwin went to the hall and cried out with a loud voice:

"Mrs. Auchmuty! Your husband is here!"

Red as a rose was the nurse as she obeyed the summons.

An Instrument of Providence

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I was walking on the beach, watching the waves come rolling in before a gale was throwing up driftwood, when a bottle was tossed at my feet. I extracted a paper from it on which was written:

We are going to pieces. Whoever gets this go to Norman D. Carlisle and tell him he will find my will in my desk in secret drawer.

This was all—no date, no signature, no address as to where Norman D. Carlisle would be found.

That night I went to bed thinking about the message. Suppose it was genuine. Somebody was enjoying property that belonged to another. But it seemed to me that if it were genuine the writer would have given at least the city in which the person for whom it was intended lived. If the perpetrator was doing the thing for sport or to pass the time or because he hadn't any more sense he would have given it.

And yet perhaps that's just what he wouldn't do. He might not like to particularize. On the other hand, a man who is about to be dumped into a roaring ocean might leave something out that he should have put in.

I was impelled to find Norman D. Carlisle. I didn't wish to engage in looking for a needle in a haystack, but I couldn't resist the feeling that it was my bounden duty to do so. There were then some 80,000,000 people in the United States alone. The name was Anglo-Saxon, and the person might be somewhere in the great British countries. Nevertheless when I found that I couldn't let the matter alone I went into it methodically. I put a personal advertisement in one newspaper in every city in the United States whose inhabitants numbered 500,000 or over for the said Norman D. Carlisle. I received several replies signed Norman D. Carlisle, the middle name usually differing. I wrote each of them, asking if he had lost a relative at sea, but they all answered in the negative—that is, so far as they knew.

After six months I put in another advertisement for Mr. Carlisle and received a reply from a Norman D. Carlisle living in a town of about 50,000 people. He had seen the ad. while in the city where it had been inserted. I asked him if he had lost a relative at sea, and he replied "No." I dropped the matter so far as he was concerned, but later he wrote me that he was a lawyer and had had a client who had sailed from Rio de Janeiro in a vessel that was catalogued among missing ships.

After some correspondence he sent me a check for expenses, and I went to see him. He made an engagement for me to meet a lady in his office, and I was introduced to Miss Edith Parks, twenty-one years old and comely. She appeared to be a lady, but was shabbily dressed. I was informed that her uncle had been lost on the missing vessel from Rio. I brought out the paper I had found, which I had carefully kept, and as soon as she saw it she said she believed that it had been written by her uncle. Some of his letters were produced, and all doubt was removed. The message, though scrawled hastily in a trembling hand, was found to correspond with the uncle's writing.

I was then told that Miss Parks had been brought up by this uncle, who was wealthy, he being unmarried and without children. After he had been declared legally dead the courts had set about administering his estate and had already found forty persons who were heirs at law.

Since Mr. Weatherby, the man who had been shipwrecked, had given Miss Parks to understand that she was to be his heir it was likely that the will mentioned in the message gave his property to her. But the desk—where was it? Mr. Weatherby's furniture had been sold a year before. Who had bought the desk? So one could tell.

Since I had gone so far in the matter I did not propose to be beaten now. Advertising having availed, I advertised for the person who had bought a desk at a sale of the effects of Cyrus Weatherby. In due time I received a reply from the purchaser. I wrote him that a niece of the deceased wished to redeem it and asked him to fix a price. He said he would sell it for $100. Miss Parks had no money to pay for it, so I mailed the man a check for the amount. The desk was sent to me, and, taking it into a cellar, I chopped it into kindling wood. Among the rubbish lay the papers in a secret drawer, and, taking this up, I found one marked "Last Will and Testament of Cyrus Blake Weatherby." I read it and found that he left all his property to his beloved niece Edith Parks.

That same evening I called on Miss Parks with the will that changed her condition from poverty to wealth. She sat like a statue staring at the paper as though she were looking through it rather than at it. I asked her what she was thinking about, but she did not hear me. I repeated the question, and, apparently awakening from a dream, she said:

"It doesn't seem possible that uncle, about to die on a boundless ocean, too wrought upon to give my address, could have reached me among the millions of people of the earth."

I did not tell her so, but she soon came to recognize me as the instrument chosen by Providence to find her.

After awhile she rewarded me by giving me herself.

FATAL INJURIES

Mrs. Ellen Coughlin died Wednesday morning at the Newton Hospital as the result of burns received at her home Tuesday night. It is thought that when she attempted to light a lamp or stove her clothing caught fire. Neighbors rushed into the house extinguished the blaze, and sent in a call for the ambulance.

At the hospital Mrs. Coughlin was unconscious until she died. She was 65 years old widow of Daniel Coughlin, and had lived in Newton Centre more than half a century. A son, Daniel, and a married daughter survive. Funeral services were held at her late home this morning at 8 o'clock, with requiem high mass at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre, at 9 o'clock.

HITCHCOCK—WINSLOW

A wedding of interest to young people of Shirley and Newton took place Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs. Helen M. Winslow in Shirley, when her adopted daughter, Miss Alison Winslow, was married to Mr. George Hitchcock of Newton. The young couple were unattended. The bride was given away by Mrs. Helen M. Winslow. She wore a beautiful gown of white embroidered silk, trimmed with cluny lace. Her tulle veil was caught up with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Rev. Charles Gray, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Newton, was the officiating clergyman. The bride entered the spacious parlor of her home on the arm of Mrs. Winslow, to music from Lohengrin played by Frank Lawton, who presided at an organ and Mrs. Grace E. Winslow on the piano. The Mendelssohn march was played as a recessional. Miss Eleanor Longley of Shirley was flower girl. The interior of the home was decorated in green and white. The young couple entertained several of their young friends at the close of the ceremony.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Percy M. Kenway of Hollis street, Newton, and is at present engaged as a civil engineer in Elmira, N. Y. The bride is well known in social circles. They were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts. After a honeymoon trip they will reside in Elmira.

MR. GIBBS PRESIDENT

Mr. Gibbs has been superintendent of the new section of the National Electric Light Association at the closing session of the sixth annual convention this week.

Mr. Gibbs has been superintendent of advertising for the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston since 1906. He was born in St. Johns, Mich. He did newspaper work in the West for some years and was graduated from Oberlin College, N. Y., in 1898. He then joined the staff of the Springfield Republican and was later private secretary to Congressman Gillett.

Mr. Gibbs also was secretary of the House Committee on Reform of the Civil Service and Washington correspondent of the Springfield Republican. In 1904 he was in charge of the Republican campaign in New York.

—Mr. and Mrs. Heywood S. French announce the engagement of their daughter Helen Winchester, to Clayton Edward Chandler of Portland, Me., University of Maine, 1913.

—Mr. Charles T. Pulsifer, president of the Newton Savings Bank, returned this week on the steamer Rotterdam, from a trip abroad. Mr. Pulsifer was in Berlin during a part of the time and states that the Americans in that city were treated with the utmost courtesy.

—Mr. F. L. Edmonds and family of Highland avenue, who have been spending the summer in the west, are due home next week. Mr. Edmonds is returning from Duluth via the Lakes while Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Edmonds's mother, remains for a time in North Dakota with another daughter.

Havana's Pathetic Little Door.

This little door is one of the entrances to La Casa Beneficencia, the large and well regulated orphan asylum of Havana. The passerby might easily take it for a coal hole if coal were generally used in Cuba, for when the door is closed there is nothing to indicate its use. On opening it, however, one finds a revolving circular box divided into three compartments. It does not need a very vivid imagination to picture the drama that has been enacted here on many occasions.

A woman, her head covered with a black shawl, her arms holding a bundle to her breast, hurriedly about to see that no one is looking she opens the door and, shaken by stifled sobs, kisses for the last time the baby she is about to renounce. She places the child in the circular box, gives it a turn and hurries on. Inside one of the Sisters of Charity hears the tinkle of a bell. It marks the arrival of a newcomer in La Casa Beneficencia.—Boston Herald.

Force of Habit.

A humorist was looking over a mill, and while in an unguarded moment he was perpetrating one of his jokes upon an innocent operative he was drawn into some ponderous gearing and badly crushed.

They extricated him from the machinery and laid him on the floor. "Who is it? Who is it?" was the anxious inquiry as a crowd collected. Nobody knew.

Then the funny man suddenly opened his eyes and strove to speak. A sympathetic bystander bent down to catch his words.

"There's good reason why nobody recognizes me," he whispered pathetically.

"What is it?" asked the sympathetic one.

"Because," the humorist explained as he saw a chance to get home, "it's because I've been traveling incog."

That was his final effort, for he never spoke again.—London Tit-Bits.

"Towel" of Hot Air.

In hotel, factory and public lavatories, where roller towels should be used because of the danger of spreading skin disease and where the expense of furnishing individual paper or cloth towels is considerable, the electric hand drier may be used economically and satisfactorily. A sanitary hand drier described in the Electrical World consists of a sheet metal case with an opening in its top in which the hands can be inserted and dried by a current of hot air. A foot pedal operates a quick acting switch which starts a blower, forcing air through the electric heater. The hand drier is, of course, absolutely sanitary, as it is unnecessary to touch any part of the apparatus when using it. The hands can be thoroughly dried, it is declared, in from thirty to forty seconds, which is less time than is required to perform the same operation with a linen or paper towel.

Associations.

All experience evinces that human sentiments are strongly affected by associations. The recurrence of anniversaries or of longer periods of time naturally freshens the recollection and deepens the impression of events with which they are historically connected. Renowned places also have a power to awaken feeling which all acknowledge. No American can pass by the fields of Bunker Hill, Monmouth and Camden as if they were ordinary spots on the earth's surface. Whoever visits them feels the sentiment of love of country kindling anew, as if the spirit that belonged to the transactions which have rendered these places distinguished still hovered round with power to move and excite all who in future time may approach them.—Daniel Webster.

Long Honeymoon.

Marriage among Moslems in India is followed by other ceremonies. The bride, with the bridegroom, is taken back to her father's house after four days; then again she comes back to her husband's house after ten days' stay and then after a stay of twenty days returns to her father's house for at least six months. Thus instead of having a short period of honeymoon they make it last almost a year.

Why Roquefort is Strong.

Roquefort cheese gets its sharp flavor from capric, caprylic and capric acids and their salts, which are formed by a sort of hydrolysis of the fat during the ripening period. This change is caused by a microbe called Penicillium roqueforti. These acids have a peppery taste.

Draining Doughnuts.

A pair of long wooden knitting needles are most excellent for draining doughnuts. As the doughnuts are fried slip them on a needle, and when it is full rest it on the top of a pan to cool. The doughnuts do not crush, and the lard drains off.

Melting the Heart of Anger.

Is thy friend angry with thee? Then provide him an opportunity of showing thee a great favor. Over that his heart must needs melt, and he will love thee again.—Richter.

Glazed Tiles.

The making of glazed tiles or "azulejos" is the only ancient Valencian industry which has retained its importance through centuries up to the present day.

Plain Pain.

Plain Patient—My face pains me, doctor. What shall I do? Doctor—I'm sure I don't know. You might try a beauty specialist.

SIX CENT FARES

mony showed that the Middlesex Co. paid the Norumbega Park Co. for "maintenance of parks" something like $7500 and also paid $3,276 in 1913 as a part of the advertising of the parks. Mr. Cox stated that these parks developed a very profitable railway business, estimated as a million passengers at Norumbega and 230,000 at Lexington Park. The Park Co. on $60,000 capital had paid 12% dividends in 1913 and one of 17½% in 1912. The Boston Suburban Co. controlling all these properties borrows money at 4% and the M. & B. Co. pays 6%.

Yesterday morning there was considerable haggling by the different attorneys, most of which appeared a sheer waste of time to the average layman. Mr. Bond went into the cost of power generated at the Lexington plant previous to its discontinuance and there was more discussion over the rates paid for electricity. There was also some testimony as to the $43,000 needed for extraordinary repairs, which Mr. Bond intimated ought not to be paid from operating expenses. He also brought out that the Company had a bookkeeping account of some $43,000 reserve for employees liability and some $5,000 reserve for accidents.

It was also brought out that the Boston Suburban Co. also controlled another subsidiary corporation previous to the 1909 consolidation known as the Suburban Manufacturing Co. with a capital of $50,000 and which sold power, installed street railway properties and sold supplies to the electric corporation. It was consolidated. It was dissolved in 1909 and paid dividends of 10% in 1907 and 6% in 1908.

Mayor Kearns of Waltham was heard in the afternoon.

"We object," he said, "to paying for the transportation of persons in other sections of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway. Every line in Waltham shows a profit to the company, and with the increase of population the profits will be comparatively larger."

"Waltham feels that it never received a fair break and should never have been compelled to pay for a transfer. However, it is claimed that increased wages to railway employees is responsible for the desired increase. Waltham, if that is true, is willing to do its share. If a raise is necessary in fare we will bear our burden, but in that case the transfer penny must be done away with. Whatever is done, Waltham wants to get rid of paying for a transfer."

A. L. Taylor, town counsel of Bedford, said that the citizens of Bedford wanted it understood that no matter what fare was decided on it should cover from center to center.

Representative Edward Carr of Hopkinton asked the commission if it decided to give the railway company a six-cent rate that some special provision be made for working people who travel every day. At present they use 50-trip tickets at 5 cents a trip. Mr. Cox said that 50-trip books would be abolished, and a straight six-cent fare charged.

The Waltham petition is as follows: "In 1907, the South Middlesex Company, then in the hands of a Receiver, because of insolvency, sold out its property to a new corporation, the Middlesex & Boston Company, the property being taken over without allowance for the stock of the old company which was wiped out.

In 1908 the Natick and Cohasset Company and the Westboro—Hopkinton Company were consolidated with the Middlesex & Boston. The former line had been fairly prosperous, although small, and had paid reasonable dividends. The latter, a still smaller company, had shown an annual deficit almost continuously.

In 1909 the Middlesex & Boston absorbed the Newton & Boston Company, a road that had for many years past been a losing proposition on a large scale. Its annual deficits had been as follows:

1903	.....	$56,890.66
1904	.....	27,941.00
1905	.....	18,704.24
1906	.....	26,699.62
1907	.....	30,358.77
1908	.....	19,234.29
1909	.....	19,991.90

Its accumulated deficit including the above and previous years was then $281,692.14.

An examination of its earnings shows that it had lost over one cent on every passenger which it had carried in the previous ten years.

In the same year (1909), the Middlesex & Boston took in the Newton Street Company, a company which had itself previously absorbed the Commonwealth avenue and Wellesley & Boston Companies in 1903.

The Newton Street Company which is the one serving Waltham and in which we are vitally interested, had for many years prior, shown a wonderfully good earning power. Its surplus for dividends had ranged as follows:

1903	.....	$ 5,217.46
1904	.....	10,734.15
1905	.....	30,497.26
1906	.....	41,196.65
1907	.....	20,413.78
1908	.....	41,890.61
1909 9 months	.....	30,871.28

It had paid the following dividends:—1903, 6 per cent; 1904, 2 per cent; 1905 3½ per cent; 1906, 5 per cent; 1907 2½ per cent; 1908, 5 per cent.

At the time of its consolidation, it had a surplus in its treasury of $84,375.31—a sum that went far towards wiping out the bad condition in the Newton & Boston treasury.

In 1912 the Lexington & Boston Company was consolidated—the last of the lines to be merged in the system as a part of the corporation. This was another of those highly unprofitable lines that the promoters of this system had seen fit to develop.

Its operations had shown the following deficits:—

1904	.....	$ 9,753.67
1905	.....	2,755.21
1906	.....	3,871.11
1907, surplus	.....	267.95
1908, deficit	.....	8,310.03
1910, 9 months	.....	21,679.74

1911 12,941.30

At the time of its consolidation, it had accumulated deficit of $35,522.27. Note that this made a 9 per cent impairment of the stock of the Lexington & Boston Company, and that the stock of the Newton & Boston Company was not only impaired but wholly wiped out by the deficit of that company, leaving the company insolvent. And yet these two companies were consolidated with the M. & B. by exchanging their stock share for share for the stock of the M. & B.

This, in brief, is the history of the present system. But it should be borne in mind that the control of all of these various companies has been vested in the Boston Suburban Electric Company since as early as 1901—owning directors upon the boards of that company holding the controlling interest in the various units, and issuing its own stock against the same. In other words, it has been a trustee for the various stockholders, and in addition formerly owned the Waltham Gas & Electric Light Company, and owns the Norumbega Company placing its own directors upon the boards of these corporations to control them.

The M. & B. Company since these consolidations has been a fairly prosperous system, having earned sufficiently to pay dividends as follows upon its enlarged capital:—

1909	6 per cent	on $1,487,000
1910	2 per cent	on $1,487,000
1911	5 per cent	on $1,487,000
1912	5½ per cent	on $1,487,000
1913	4 per cent	on $1,987,000
1914	4 per cent	on $1,987,000

It is true that the company points to its present deficit of $265,754.54 as showing that the company is not prosperous. But this is entirely due to its having absorbed two companies that had enormous deficits—the Newton & Boston and the Lexington & Boston. These deficits together totalling $337,214.41.

In other ways the system has been increasingly prosperous. In the last five years its number of passengers has increased at an average of about 800,000 per year. In every year its gross revenues have increased, and also its net revenue applicable to dividends. Its net revenue in 1914 ($80,294.68) is the largest in its history enabling the company to pay its 4 per cent dividend and apply a small amount to reducing its deficit.

In the face of these facts, what does the road advance for increasing fares? While the attorneys for the road have not argued their cases as yet, we may, however, gather from their opening and from the exhibits that they have filed that they rely

1. Upon the increase of wages awarded employees in the arbitration proceedings; and
2. Upon the increased cost of operation in other ways as compared with earlier years,—i. e. "the increased cost of railroad living."

That especial emphasis is laid on the item of wages can be seen from the wording of the road's attorney during the arbitration proceedings, that if wages were increased, they would be compelled to increase fares or decrease facilities.

What does the increase of wages amount to? In back pay the men are awarded $24,532.66. To this amount the company voluntarily added $5,157.75, making a total of $29,690.41. Had this been deducted from the earnings of the past year, the road would still have been able to pay 2½ per cent dividends.

What increase does this new wage scale mean for the coming year? It is estimated by the accountants of the Public Service Commission to amount to $7,452.24. In other words when conditions are adjusted to the new scale, this item will not affect the dividend rate more than 1-3 per cent. To state the same figures in a different way, the increased cost of carrying a single passenger, due to the increase of wages is exactly 0.00038 cents,—less than four-hundredths of a penny. Yet on the basis of this, they ask us each to pay an additional cent.

To what else since the increased wages do not warrant increase of fares, can the company point to justify its claim.

They point to the fact that it now costs 19.05 cents per car mile to operate, as against 16.08 cents in 1901, and 14.83 cents in 1902; and to the fact that their earnings per car mile (19.89 cents in 1901 and 18.41 cents in 1902) have only increased to 26.62 cents in 1914. But the above shows that the net earnings were only 3.81 cents in 1901, 3.58 cents in 1902, and 7.57 cents in 1914. In other words the company earns above operating expenses twice as much as it did in the earliest years.

But during the same period it has permitted its floating indebtedness and other fixed charges to increase disproportionately. Today its fixed charges per car mile are 5.42 cents, as against 3.20 cents in 1901.

In spite of this the net earnings per passenger have increased from 0.91 cents in 1911 to 11.4 cents in 1914.

But what has caused this increase in operating expense? Why does it cost more to move an electric car one mile today than it did ten years ago? The answer is POWER. And when we reach this point we have reached the crux of the whole matter. Why, in spite of the steady advance in electrical science, should this system, sixth in point of tonnage and cars operated, in Massachusetts, be paying far more for its power than formerly.

The answer is to be found in the history of the Boston Suburban Electric, furnished up to the year 1909, the bulk of the power required by the M. & B. system. The company paid for its power per car mile 4.5 cents in 1914, and only 4.3 cents in 1908. But in spite of this lower rate, the Waltham Gas & Electric Light Company was a highly prosperous concern, paying 12½ per cent dividends. Yet in 1909 the Boston Suburban Electric sold out the Waltham Gas Company to the Edison Company for $1,100,000—equivalent to a distribution of $240 a share on the stock of the Waltham G. & E. L. Company. And simultaneously the M. & B. Company (owned, remember, by the Boston Suburban Electric Company) signed a ten year contract with the Edison Company for its power. Recall, also, that the majority of the directors of the Waltham

the explanation. They are willing that the M. & B. Company should pay this large amount needlessly, because it comes back to themselves into that pocket,—the treasury of the B. S. E. Co.

Do you realize what this expenditure means. It means a daily expenditure for a season of 100 days of $107.76. This amount is daily given away.

We hear the railway rejoins, "Yes, but look at the increased business the parks develop!"

But business developed to have a value must be profitable. It costs the road 1.44 cents for every passenger it carries, so that their daily payment is equivalent to carrying over 7400 passengers a day free to these parks.

If any more than that are carried, the road makes 1.44 cents profit on each. But how many are carried daily to these parks? More than 7400? More than 740,000 for the season? We believe that this payment unwarranted and unnecessary, wipes out the whole of the profit to the road from the operation of these park extras, and feel that either the parks should be divorced from the railway and made self-supporting, or that they should be owned by the railway, as is the custom throughout Massachusetts, and the profits therefrom disclosed to the public. In that way our parks would no longer be a burden on the railway system, and a concealed excuse for demanding increased fares the year round.

We cannot foresee just what other wastes may be disclosed during the present investigation. We do not yet know why (without paying any increase of wages) it costs the M. & B. over $33,000 more in 1914 to operate the same car miles than in 1913.

We do not know why the office expenses are over $6600 in excess of 1913.

We do not know what portion of the $32,000 for insurance is being actually used, and what part is being put away for a rainy day. But we feel that this is not a time for preparing for rainy days.

We do not know what portion of the $33,000 set aside for damages is really required for pending claims and what is for another rainy day fund.

We do not know why wages cost the company $55,000 more in 1914 than in 1913, before any arbitration award.

We do not know why so much emphasis is laid on the need of the company for $43,500 to repair its tracks for we find that it has spent $38,000 in 1911, $46,000 in 1912, $34,000 in 1913, and $40,000 in 1914 for this same kind of work. Therefore we do not see how this expense can be called an extraordinary expense beyond the usual requirements.

We do not know why the company demands an extra $1500 for raising seat cushions. We all know that the seats need the repairs, but the company has spent large amounts annually on its car repairs. In 1914, $44,987, and we feel that the cushions can be replaced from such ordinary disbursements the coming year.

We are asked to increase fares in order that a reserve for depreciation may be accumulated. The company requests the following amounts for this purpose this year:

4 per cent on cars, electric equipment and misc. property $45,376.67

5 per cent on power stations and storage batteries $21,626.43

The accountants of the Public Service Commission report that in their judgment these amounts are excessive and we humbly agree. What a proper charge should be depends entirely upon the amounts which the company has been expending from year to year upon the upkeep of its property, and for this and for a careful appraisal of its property, we must rely upon the Public Service Commission. But we do protest against paying a depreciation charge upon an idle power plant that must remain idle until 1919, which is the date to which this company has tied its own hands from making its power at an economical rate. If we must have these power plants idle, if we must pay 4 per cent dividends upon the $400,000 investments which they represent, is it fair to make us pay in addition an annual charge of $21,000 for their depreciation?

Turning now to a detailed consideration of the lines operating in Waltham and known as the Waltham Division, we have for the first time disclosed the relation in which these lines stand financially to the rest of the system. From a statement prepared at this time by the accountants of the Public Service Commission, we learn that the earnings of these lines in 1914 were as follows:—

Main line $125,775.50

Watertown line 65,926.93

Auburndale line 52,932.14

Crafts Street 40,037.91

Newton (Waverley and Roberts) 16,979.73

The proportionate expense of operating these lines, including fixed charges, was,—

Main line $94,263.34

Auburndale 47,888.92

Watertown 50,951.40

Crafts St. 34,720.43

Newton 14,093.71

This gives us the following net profits for these lines,—

Main $31,412.16

Watertown 14,975.53

Auburndale 5,043.22

Newton 2,888.02

Crafts St. 5,317.43

Total $59,634.36

The number of passengers was as follows,—

Main line 2,785,298

Watertown 1,412,321

Auburndale 1,110,370

Crafts St. 843,375

Newton 371,025

Total 6,522,387

The mileage of these lines was,—

Main 385,628.68

Watertown 208,219.85

Auburndale 195,704.64

Crafts St. 141,889.98

Newton 57,595.87

Total 989,039.09

The gross earnings per car mile

were,—

Main line 32.62

Watertown 31.66

Auburndale 27.05

Crafts Street 28.22

Newton 29.48

For all five lines 30.50

These figures should be compared with the operating cost per car mile (19.05) and the fixed charges per car mile (5.42 cents), a total of 24.47 cents. This comparison shows that each of the Waltham lines was highly profitable, the earnings of the Main line 32.62 cents per car mile, being the largest of any line on the system.

The same statement reveals the fact that the following lines fall below the operating expense and fixed charges of 24.47 cents per car mile, Com. Ave. Div. Auburndale line 21.62

Highlands line 19.28

N. & B. Div. Main line 23.43

Centre line 17.81

L. & B. Div. Main line 23.66

Waltham line 17.46

Woburn line 9.28

Natick Div. Cohasset line 12.93

Needham line 21.86

Westboro & Hopkinton line 15.36

In other words, 10 of the 22 lines are being operated at a loss. Of these the only one entering Waltham is the Lexington line.

The Waltham Division therefore, earned $56,634.36 in 1914 above all expenses and fixed charges,—an amount equal to three-fourths of the net earnings of the entire M. & B. system. And yet it is on these lines that it is proposed to raise the fares to carry still further the burden of ten unprofitable roads.

We also know that these five Waltham lines have been increasingly profitable from year to year. Compare their earning power per car mile in 1913 with that of 1914.

Main line 1913 1914 31.58 32.62

Watertown 28.06 31.66

Auburndale 26.94 27.05

Crafts Street 26.67 28.22

Newton 28.02 29.48

The company tells us that the increase of fares proposed will yield approximately $92,000. On the basis of last year's travel, and with no normal increase thereof, it will yield $62,523 on the Waltham Division alone. This, then, is what the proposed increase means to Waltham, as a large part of this amount must be borne by our citizens.

But, is such an increase justified? Is it justified when the increase in wages on the Waltham Division alone has been only $10,000? When the increase for the whole system will be only $37,000?

Justified while these directors continue to manipulate the finances of the road so as to conceal its real net earnings?

Every dollar that these directors, acting as the directors also of the B. S. E. Co., can take out of the pocket of the M. & B. on some apparently legitimate claim, thereby reduces the latter's apparent earnings, and tends to justify their demand for increased fares at a time such as this. And in this lies the explanation of those consolidations, share for share, with insolvent and impaired roads; those payments to the B. S. E. Co. treasury via the treasury of the Norumbega Park Company; that extra 2 per cent on the $1,215,000 which they charge the M. & B. for money; and their willingness to sell out that profitable corporation, the Waltham Gas & Electric Company, distributing the large proceeds among themselves, and saddle the M. & B. Company with an expensive power contract.

The gentlemen behind this system since 1901 have never been guided in their dividend declarations by the actual earnings of the system as a whole. In every year since they thus consolidated every branch of these lines down to 1913, the net declared dividends in excess of the net earnings of the system as a whole. These dividends for the years 1901 to 1914 inclusive total $844,527.50, and the net earnings for the same period only $389,116.64. In other words, the dividends have exceeded the net earnings by approximately $255,000, which, strangely enough, is almost the exact amount of the present deficit of which they complain.

This sum of $255,000, if it had been kept in the treasury, would today reduce the floating indebtedness proportionately, and thus reduce the interest charges by $15,300 a year, almost equivalent to a 1 per cent dividend.

But such has never been the policy of the men behind this system. Even if some of the branches were operating regularly at an annual loss, they continued to pay out of the others as large a dividend as their separate earnings would permit, allowing the unprofitable lines to accumulate their deficit. It would seem that this process was carried on as long as could be safely done, namely, until the capital of the Newton & Boston was wiped out, and the capital of the Lexington & Boston seriously impaired,—and has resulted in the deplorable situation in which the affairs of the road are now involved.

G. BARTLETT WILLARD, Pres. Waltham Board of Trade.

THE NORTH SHORE TRIP

"On to Gloucester!" is the cry these hot days of those who have sailed over the north shore route of the Boston & Gloucester Steamship Company in years past in the steel steamers Cape Ann and City of Gloucester. These steamers leave the north side of Central wharf, at the foot of State street, weather right, on week days at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M.; returning leave Gloucester at 2:15 P. M. On Sundays and holidays leave Boston at 10:15 A. M.; leave Gloucester at 2:15 P. M. The one way fare is only 50 cents.

McKenney & Waterbury Co., Franklin street, corner Congress, are showing the latest and most improved Lighting Fixtures in Gas and Electric for homes and public buildings, goods of their own manufacture, and from all parts of the world. The goods that they are showing is a rare treat.

HINTS ON JAM MAKING.

Use only fruit which has been gathered dry. Wet fruit prevents the jam from keeping and is often the cause of mold.

Fruit should be boiled as soon as possible after being gathered.

Always use the best sugar and in the right proportions. Cheap sugar is unsatisfactory and is no economy, resulting in no saving.

As a general rule one pound of fruit requires one pound of sugar, but this varies slightly with the amount and kind of fruit.

Always use a copper or china lined pan and stir with a wooden spoon.

The fruit must be boiled quickly and stirred frequently if the color and flavor are to be of the best.

Overboiling destroys both color and flavor. Half an hour to forty minutes is long enough to boil most jams.

Store, if possible, in glass jars, so that any sign of fermentation or mold may be detected.

Jams must be stored in a cool, dry cupboard.

If the fruit is preferred whole, boil a sirup before adding the fruit.

Color Hints.

The tendency at present is very largely in favor of dark colors, says the Dry Goods Economist, navy blue and brown being particularly desirable. There has also been more interest shown in black than for a number of years. Dark shades of green are being used to a considerable extent, but even for opening pieces there have been fewer light colors shown than for a number of seasons. When light shades are employed sand and putty colors are being taken.

GRACE IN COLLAR LINES.

Striking and graceful in line are many of the new autumn collars. Note the specimen illustrated. It is an eccentrically shaped neck collar of handkerchief linen trimmed with two lines of hemstitching designed to wear with autumn coats or frock coats of serge or mohair.

GIFTS TO GIVE THE INVALID

A canopy would chirrup many a weary hour away.

A pretty, high bodied cap would be appreciated by a woman.

A pine or rose petal pillow would afford refreshing fragrance.

An electric flashlight within reach at night is almost indispensable.

A tea wagon to wheel up beside the bed would vary the meal service pleasantly.

A food warming plate such as is used for babies would keep a cup of bouillon warm.

An Indian blanket would keep off many a draft and make a varying temperature unnoticeable.

An attractive rose bowl or long stemmed vase would lend its charm to the invalid's bouquets.

The sick person appreciates many changes of cheery bath robes, negligees and dainty fancy slippers.

A night bottle with a glass tipped over it and a spoonful of cordial in the stopper would be handy in case of a chill.

A prettily lined and ribbon bedecked box, filled with the patient's favored toilet preparations, is practical, dainty and very acceptable.

One of the new cache nightgowns of chiffon would be very convenient to slip into to take a meal or when an unexpected guest arrives.

A vacuum bottle would bring comfort, and some hot water bags have such beautiful covers that they are pleasing as well as useful.

HER FIRST EXPERIENCE.

— Mistress — Dinner won't be ready for two hours! Good gracious, North, what's the delay?

— North — Why, mum, you said you wanted split pea soup, and, faith, it's taken me two hours and twenty minutes to split 300 peas, and there are 479 to split yet. Oh counted 'em myself.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Many Things Instructive as Well as Interesting.

A SMALL SPRIG OF SOCIETY

Chicago Boy Scouts of America Enact an Old Indian Legend, the Story of Chief Owasstippe — Origin of the Name Cowboy.

At Narragansett Pier, R. I., the little children of the rich find much to amuse and interest them. During the summer season their time is mostly occupied in swimming, sailing and other water sports, though they are kept under close supervision by their parents and attendants. Many of the little ones are smart swimmers and in the quiet waters of Narragansett pier find a safe place to show their skill. A particularly fearless little lady in the water is Miss Katharine Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Chase of New York. The camera man induced her to pose for her picture, and she very obligingly consented. The photograph here reproduced shows her to be a very sweet and winsome little girl.

MISS KATHARINE CHASE.

Boy Scouts Act a Legend.

Chicago boy scouts, who are camping at Crystal Lake, near Muskegon, Mich., recently provided a novel diversion for themselves and for other vacationists who make visits to the camp from nearby resorts. The boys re-enacted some of the old Indian scenes, which, according to the legends of the locality, occurred at the site of the camp during the early days of western invasion by the white race.

The pathetic story of Chief Owasstippe of the Ottawa Indians of Owasippe county who refused to leave the shores of the White River when his people were forced north by the white invasion, because he hoped that his two sons who mysteriously disappeared while his some day might return to him, was the subject. It was written in play form by the Chicago boy scouts and was produced amid the original sylvan scenes at the camp.

The story of the old chief recently was recalled by the finding of two skeletons and the remains of a canoe in the shifting river bed. It is believed in the locality that the skeletons are those of the missing sons. The camp of the scouts has been named "Camp Owasstippe" in honor of the dead chieftain.

Origin of the Cowboy.

A cowboy, to our modern minds, means a man who herds cattle. Yet the original "cowboys" instead of herding cattle stole them, says the American Boy. The name seems first to have been applied to a band of horsemen, part soldiers and part bandits, who fought on the British side during the Revolution. Westchester county, N. Y., was the scene of their operations, and the most of them were Tories. Because they drove away many cattle on their raids they were called cowboys. Opposed to the cowboys in their raids through the section of New York which lay between the British and American lines were the Skinners, a somewhat similar band of marauders, who espoused the Continental cause.

Boy Scout His Own Surgeon.

But for the fact that he was a boy scout himself and was accompanied by other members of that organization George Cowan, fourteen years old, of Sharon Hill, Pa., might have bled to death recently when he cut one of his great toes nearly off while chopping down a tree with a scout ax.

The blade of the ax rebounded and cut him through the shoe. Calling one of his companions, Cowan directed him how to stop the flow of blood, after which he was carried to the hospital.

A PLEA FOR FATHER.

A Well Known Writer Presents His Case Tellingly.

Albert Payson Terhune makes a plea for the much abused father of the family in his article in the Victoria Review, entitled "A Halo For Father."

It was at a vaudeville show. Vaudeville shows reflect the soul of the man in the street; not his brain—his soul—the thing he feels with. A damsel with a furry voice was singing a sobful ditty. Its refrain ran much like this: Take good care of mother, lad, when I'm dead and gone! Be good to her and shield her from all pain.

Reverse her silver head. For after she is dead You will never know a mother's love again.

From the gallery arose audible sniffs, amid the whirlwind of applause. Even in the self contained orchestra section more than one white handkerchief frisked.

Every one there had had a mother, strangely enough.

The next act was a comedy sketch, during which two weirdly appareled men sang in unison a song with the ensuing refrain:

Dad, dad, dad, The poor old worthless geezer! The fuss we've had With that old patience teaser. He lacks the spirit of a mouse. Most any one can down him. We let him hang around the house— It's cheaper than to drown him.

Again emotion swept the gallery, this time in the form of unextinguishable laughter—the laugh on dad.

"I wonder," suggested a born fool after the show, "what would have happened if they'd switched the sentiment on those two deathless lyrics, if they'd sung sabbily about father's silver head and the angels whispering blessings to him and then if they'd called mother a 'worthless geezer' and said they let her hang around the house because it was cheaper than to drown her?"

No one answered the born fool, not even according to his folly, largely because every one knew just what would have happened in such an impossible case as the shifting of the two songs.

The audience at first mention of father in the transposed lyric would have begun to chuckle. And before two lines of the denatured mother song could have been delivered the hissing would have led to something like a riot. That is the answer.

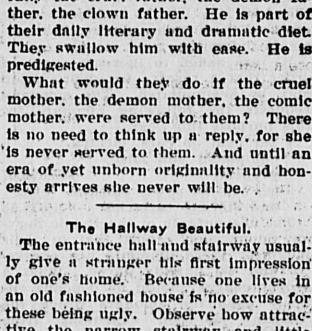

Why in vaudeville, which is a mirror, distorted if you like, of life and of life's opinions, is mother a signal for handkerchiefs and father for howls? Why in plays, in books, in real life, is there a halo around mother's head, while father goes haloes to the grave?

Audiences, book and theatrical, are prepared to accept willingly and naturally the cruel father, the demon father, the clown father. He is part of their daily literary and dramatic diet. They swallow him with ease. He is predigested.

What would they do if the cruel mother, the demon mother, the comic mother, were served to them? There is no need to think up a reply, for she is never served to them. And until an era of yet unborn originality and honesty arrives she never will be.

The Hallway Beautiful.

The entrance hall and stairway usually give a stranger his first impression of one's home. Because one lives in an old fashioned house is no excuse for these being ugly. Observe how attractive the narrow stairway and little hallway pictured here have been made. The walls are covered with plain, heavy cartridge paper. The stairs have been stained and polished to match the wood trimmings. The lower hall floor is stained and polished, but almost entirely covered by soft oriental rugs. A little table at the foot of the stairs holds a vase of flowers. On the wall are simple pictures in narrow wooden frames.

Testing Eggs.

A simple way to test eggs is said to be to make a brine by dissolving two ounces of salt in one pint of water. Place the eggs in this. An egg laid the same day will sink to the bottom, an egg laid the previous day will not sink quite to the bottom. An egg three days old will float just under the surface, and an older egg will float on or above the surface.

Several young ladies and children have worked faithfully and especially thanks are due to the man, who, thru the month of August, collected the donations in his automobile; also to other men in the stores and the station and the friends whose gifts of money, flowers, fruits, eggs and vegetables have sent comfort and pleasure to many.

RED DEATH OF WAR

Tragic Fate of Maximilian at the Hands of the Mexicans.

HIS PENALTY FOR FAILURE.

The Atonement of Blood—How It Was Consummated and How the Vengeance of the Victors Was Satisfied—Coolness of the Unfortunate Prince.

No more tragic incident is recorded in history than the execution of Maximilian. Half a century ago a younger brother of the Emperor Francis Joseph was sent to rule Mexico. Together with his wife, he sat upon the frail throne, even then tottering. How he failed in another story, but when he was taken prisoner he prepared himself for death—the red death of war.

In a volume written some years ago Major John N. Edwards pictures graphically the closing hours of the tall, handsome prince who would be king as follows:

The morning broke fair and white in the sky, and at 6:30 o'clock three carriages drew up in front of the main gate of the convent of Capuchins. The bells rang in all the steeples, there were soldiers everywhere, and long lines of glittering steel that rose and fell in yet the soft, sweet hush of the morning.

In the first carriage sat Maximilian and Father Soria, a priest. In the second carriage there came Miramon and his priest, in the third Mejia and his. The solemn cortege started.

All the people were in the street. On the faces of the multitude there were evidences of genuine and unaffected sorrow. Some among the crowd lifted their hats as the victims passed along, some turned away their heads and wept, and some, even among the soldiers and amid the hostile ranks of the Liberals, fell upon their knees and wept.

The place of surrender was to be the place of execution. Northwest of the city a mile or more the Hill of the Bells (El Cerro de las Campanas) appeared itself. It was inclosed on three sides by 6,000 soldiers of all arms, leaving the rear or uncovered side resting upon a wall.

It was 7:30 o'clock when the carriages halted at the place of execution. Maximilian was the first to alight. He stepped proudly down, took a handkerchief from his pocket and his hat from his hand and beckoned for one of his Mexican servants to approach. The man came.

"Take these," the emperor said. "They are all I have to give."

The faithful Indian took them, kissed them, cried over them, fell upon his knees a few moments in prayer to the good God for the good master and arose a hero.

In front of the dead wall three crosses had been firmly embedded in the ground. On each side was a placard bearing the name of the victim to be immolated there. That upon the right was where the emperor was to be shot, that in the center was Miramon, that upon the left for the grim old stoic and fighter Mejia.

Maximilian walked firmly to his place. The three men embraced each other three times. To Mejia he said: "We will meet in heaven."

Mejia bowed, smiled and laid his hand upon his heart.

To Miramon he said: "Brave men are respected by sovereigns. Permit me to give you the place of honor."

As he said this he took Miramon gently by the arm and led him to the center cross, embracing him for the last time.

Escobedo was not on the ground. An aid-de-camp, however, brought permission for each of the victims to deliver a farewell address. The emperor spoke briefly. Miramon drew from his pocket a small piece of paper and read.

When Miramon had ceased reading Maximilian placed his hand on his breast, threw up his head and cried in a singularly calm and penetrating voice, "Fire!"

Eighteen muskets were discharged as one musket. Mejia and Miramon died instantly. Four bullets struck the emperor, three in the left and one in the right breast. Three of these bullets passed entirely through his body, coming out high up on the left shoulder; the other remained embedded in the right lung. The emperor fell a little sideways and upon his right side, exclaiming almost gently and sadly: "Oh, hombre, hombre! Oh, man! Oh, man!"

He was not yet dead. A soldier went up close to him and fired into his stomach. The emperor moved slightly as if still sensible to pain. Another came out of the firing party and, putting the muzzle of his musket up close to his breast, shot him fairly through the heart.

The tragedy was ended. Mexican vengeance was satisfied; the soul of the unfortunate prince was with its God, and until the judgment day the blood of one who was too young and too gentle to die will cry out from the ground even as the blood of Abel.

Sugar as Food.

With the temperature 62 below zero Shackleton and his men, in their antarctic exploration, in marching took two or three lumps of sugar each every two hours. Within ten minutes of eating these they could feel the heat going through their bodies.

SCARED BY A FISH

Or Maybe It Was a New Species of Inland Sea Monster.

A VISION IN RED EAGLE LAKE.

It Couldn't Have Been a Dream, the Angler Admits That, Nor a Bear, Nor a Shark, Though It Did Look Like a Dog, but Anyhow and Luckily It Got Away.

In camp on Red Eagle lake in the Glacier National park, devoured by mosquitoes as big as cultures, as fierce as tigers and as numerous as drops of water in the Pacific ocean!

This is a bad beginning for a fish story. The language seems to suggest that the narrator has already become unreliable. As a matter of fact, phrases which are strictly accurate may be palpably misleading.

The language of hyperbole is needed to present an adequate picture. Perhaps the mosquitoes are not quite so big or fierce or numerous as stated, but they seem to be.

But to the fish story. And the language of vivid metaphor shall be laid aside. What follows is fact—unadorned, unexaggerated fact. I could not have dreamed it. I cannot even now that I have begun to put pen to paper hope to tell it in such a way as to bring the scene with realizing earnestness before the eye of my brother anglers.

It was evening. I was on the lake alone in my little canvas boat. The fishing had been good. I was returning to camp satisfied. The sack of fish, my fishing kit, discarded tackle, the net, etc., lying at the bottom of the boat, it seemed safer to leave the rod to poke out over the stern, the flies trailing the water—out of mischief, as I thought, where they could not get tangled with any of the truck.

So I roved along gently, happy in the slaughter I had accomplished and wishing my friends had been with me to do their share. And the rod shot over the stern of the boat before my very eyes!

I had the presence of mind not to make a forward dart and grab for it as it disappeared. Such a violent movement would undoubtedly have collapsed my collapsible boat. I sat in speechless amazement, too startled for thought.

And then closing by a mighty splashing and plunging. I turned and saw on the top of the water something swimming, a red brown head and shoulders. I was frightened. It was so huge.

I thought of a bear, of a shark, and stories of sea monsters flashed through my mind. The thing was swimming slowly. What I could see of it looked for all the world like the head of a magnificent St. Bernard dog I used to own.

Then I came to myself. I realized that this was a fish of a species not known to me as of an incredible, unheard-of size. He had taken my fly, had hooked himself on to the rod which he had dragged overboard and was swimming slowly because he was drawing it along the bottom of the lake!

I chased him. He dived, came up again with a splashing like that of an elephant in a pond and smashed down again. Almost I could keep my eye on him, and so much time did he waste in his frantic efforts to get free.

If I had been able to row properly, facing in a direction opposite to the one in which I was moving, I believe I could have overtaken him. But I needed to keep my eye on him, and so had to backwater with the oars, losing power at every stroke. I was thinking slowly. I was still too stunned to think normally. I was puzzled by the fact that such a monster did not break my frail tackle in a moment. There was no resistance so long as the forty yards of line continued to unwind or the rod to move easily through the water.

As often as he swung over and dropped down on the six foot leader it simply yielded beneath him. Five times he rose, and the fifth time I was quite near him. He seemed to be anything from four feet to six feet long. I have at home a muskellunge which I caught five years ago in the St. Lawrence river. He weighed thirty-two pounds and measures forty-seven inches. This fellow was much bigger and more terrifying. And I have no other means of guessing at his size and weight.

Then with the sixth leap and dive something gave, and the monster was seen no more. I roved slowly back to camp actually unnerved by the adventure. Literally—and he who will may laugh at me—I felt afraid to be alone in the falling evening light, alone on a piece of water inhabited by such creatures as the one who had pursued me and whom I had pursued.

I was glad to hear the friendly hail of my guide from the landing place of logs which we had constructed, to see the glare of the campfire and to sniff the smell of supper. Then I reckoned up my loss—a rod, $35; a reel, $17.50, and a four dollar line—nearly $50 worth of property at the bottom of Red Eagle lake!—Rev. C. F. Aked, D. D., LL. D., in New York American.

Great Educator's Advice.

Children should not leave school without knowing what good books are, and without having their imagination, which is the great power with children at a certain age, so awakened and directed as to insure at least some degree of interest and culture broader than the education that is limited to their business expectations, and tending to govern conduct on general principals rather than on impulse.—G. Stanley Hall.

"Art is Long and Time is Fleeting."

The sentiment, "Art is long and time is fleeting," in Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," is adapted from one of the aphorisms of Hippocrates, the celebrated physician of antiquity. "Ara longa, vita brevis." "Art is long, life is short." The meaning, of course, is that the time required to attain perfection in any art is long, while the span of mortal life is short, and we must therefore make the most of it if we wish to accomplish anything.

First Hours of Sleep the Best.

It has been proved conclusively that the first hours of sleep are deeper than the rest and that with the length the tendency to wake at any noise increases. From this follows the recuperative value of the few first hours of deep sleep and the explanation why men of great energy like Napoleon, Frederick the Great and Virchow were completely satisfied with a sleep of from three to four hours.

Sheep as Weather Prophets.

What animal is more sedate than a sheep? And what more frolicsome than a lamb? The gambolling of lambs and the fighting of their elders is an old sign of a change in the weather. Thus, in a spell of frost, if lambs are frolicking and skipping, while the sheep butt one another, sedately fighting, the weatherwise see a certain sign of a thaw where none other is visible.

Bug Bites A'armed Them.

It appears that bugs have only been known in England since 1500 A. D., when the poor Huguenots and other Protestants were accused of carrying them across the channel. One day two court ladies discovered marks upon their fair persons and were panic-stricken. Such marks could only be plague spots, thought they?

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE—For the grand opening of the regular fall and winter season at B. F. Keith's Theatre

there has been gathered one of the biggest and best galleries of international star attractions ever presented on one stage. Will M. Cressy and Blanche

Dayne, without question the cleverest

exponents of the American rural type of humor in this country, will appear in Mr. Cressy's best and newest play-

let, "The Man Who Remembered."

Another big feature will be the Great

Pekin Mysteries, a wonderful troupe

of Oriental wonder workers and master wizards who have just landed in this country from China. Nellie

Nichols, the cleverest of singing comedienne, known as the "Will Someone Name My Nationally" Girl, will have a number of new and clever

character songs, and another strong comedy feature will be Max's Great

Burlesque Circus. This remarkable

comedy animal act introduces a complete circus, with dogs, horses, ponies,

mules, clowns, wrestlers, and all manner of burlesque feats. Lambert, the master musician, will offer his startlingly realistic portraits of great

music masters, such as Liszt, Joachim,

Strauss, Gounod, and other famous composers; and the surrounding bill

includes McWilliams, Stendel & Bal-

win; Hamilton and Barnes; Johnson and Wells; and Dainty Emily and incomparable Ajax.

Manager Hawthurst Urges Extreme

Vigilance in Preventing Fires—

Effect on Insurance Companies

With Stock Markets Closed Is Explained—Plant and Stocks of Great Value in Present Trade Situation.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 23 (Special).—

Fire insurance men are endeavoring to impress upon the public the importance of special care in the matter of fire prevention at this particular time.

Normal losses have been heavy, and if a serious conflagration should come

the existing financial and banking conditions would produce an unusual result. It would be necessary for the companies to sell large amounts of securities to pay a loss of that magnitude, and with the stock exchanges

closed this would be impossible, no matter what great sacrifices they might be willing to make as to price

in order to meet their obligations promptly. A conflagration just at this time, with its destruction of values

and its disturbance of financial conditions would be serious.

That the situation is appreciated by business men generally is shown by the action of Marshall Field & Co.,

who have instructed the heads of all departments and the managers of all factories, warehouses, garages and other properties to be exceptionally careful at this time as regards fire hazard. The notice, issued by Arthur Hawthurst, manager of the Insurance Department, is as follows:

"Owing to the terrible state of af-

airs in Europe, which affects the entire United States more or less in every direction, this department

wishes now to call your particular attention to the results of sustaining

a loss by fire. As the stock exchanges

are closed the insurance companies

would have no market for their securities in case they were called upon for a large amount of money for losses

that might be sustained by an excessive fire or conflagration. Naturally, they look for the help of every one to prevent such occurring.

"It is the duty of every assured, be

he a householder or an employee, to take every wise precaution to prevent fire and its dire results at all times, particularly so at the present

ELECTRICS COLLIDE

Narrow Escape For Many Passengers At Chestnut Hill

A narrow escape from a serious accident took place last Saturday afternoon about 3.30 o'clock when two electric cars of the Boston and Worcester line collided on Boylston street, a quarter of a mile west of the Chestnut Hill transfer point.

Car 101, in charge of motorman Howison and conductor Kendall, had pulled into Chestnut Hill and discharged its passengers. The motorman shifted ends and started back on the inbound rail to a crossover which would bring his car onto a middle track used for storing spare cars.

Before this car had entirely cleared the crossover and while it was in a diagonal position across the tracks, car 141, in charge of motorman Moody and conductor Capenger, came along on the inbound track from the direction of Wellesley. They sideswiped with sufficient force to drive each into the roadway on either side of the reservation.

The empty car was nearly bowled over. The inward-bound car, containing about 20 passengers, went tearing along the reservation until the soft earth dug up by the forward trucks piled high enough to afford an effective check on its progress.

Instantly there was a panic among the passengers and a hurried scrambling for the doors. The cars were not seriously damaged. The sides which came in contact were scratched, one step and the journal boxes on each car being torn off.

One of the male passengers sustained cuts from a falling electric light bulb. The others were cut and bruised by being thrown against the seats.

A wrecking crew worked for more than two hours to get the damaged cars back on the rails. The workmen used another car to pull the inward-bound car back on the rail and this was finally derailed also.

The accident caused a serious mix-up in handling passengers, they being obliged to walk from Chestnut Hill to a point beyond the scene of the accident to reach outgoing cars.

The names of the injured persons were carefully guarded by the railroad officials. Those hurt were treated at the Chestnut Hill waiting room and then hurried away. It is known that none suffered from anything more serious than cuts and bruises of the hands.

General Manager Shaw of the Boston & Worcester Road was on the scene of the accident sometime afterward, but was not prepared to state definitely what its cause was, though he intimated that it was probably due to a mixup in judgment upon the part of a motorman regarding the right of way.

The vacuum process is more successful in cleaning out the public treasury than in cleaning up the public business.

YOUNG BOY KILLED

Falls From One Automobile and Is Struck
By Another

Falling from the rear seat of his father's automobile as it rounded a sharp turn in Newton Lower Falls Saturday evening, 6-year-old Russell J. Kenney was struck by a second motor car that was directly behind and was almost instantly killed. He was rushed to the Newton Hospital, near by, but life was extinct when that institution was reached.

The machine that struck the boy was driven by George W. Evans, a member of the teaching force of the Charlestown High School, who lives at 17 Everett avenue, Dorchester. Mr. Evans was accompanied by four members of his family. No blame attaches to him.

The victim was the child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kenney of 177 Beacon street, Newton Lower Falls. The father conducts a dry goods store near the scene of the accident. His automobile was standing in an alley off Washington street, the side of the building in which his store is situated, when he started for home, and as he drove out of the alley he had another son, Raymond, 4 years old, beside him on the front seat, while his other son and a neighbor's boy were in the rear of the machine. It is said that Russell was standing up and as the car swung the corner, lost his balance.

Mr. Evans was driving toward Newton and was directly in the rear of the Kenney machine and about to pass it. He was unable to avoid striking the boy as he fell from the other car.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Newton Hospital will be held at the Nurses' Home on the hospital grounds at Newton Lower Falls on Monday, the 28th inst., at 4.10 P. M. for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year and of transacting such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

THE DANCANT

Delightful Affair Saturday Evening at the Brae Burn

One of the most delightful out-door society events ever held at Brae-Burn was the Dancant on Saturday afternoon, from 4 until 6. The charming environment of the Club House, with its chestnut groves of dense green foliage as yet untouched by autumn tints, served admirably to set off the gay ensemble.

A green canvas was laid for the dancing and around it were arranged about 75 tables where refreshments were served by the attendants at the Club, during the intermissions.

About 75 couples participated in the dancing, which was also enjoyed by several hundred spectators. Chairs were placed on the lawn and many of the guests were entertained on the spacious verandas of the Club.

Those present must have been impressed by the great interest taken by the spectators in the present dances, which is certainly an argument in favor of the dances now in vogue.

The old style of dancing contains an element of monotony but the variety of movements and rhythms in the new dances, furnishes entertainment for the spectators as well as for the dancers. Altho' it has been said that dancing may be done "gracefully, ungracefully or disgracefully," the dancing at Brae-Burn was most decidedly graceful, and the music by the 8th Massachusetts Infantry Band of Lynn, was so excellent, that the musicians were obliged to respond repeatedly to encore.

"My Croony Melody," as usual, was a most entrancing melody for the Maxixe, and called forth many enthusiastic encores, and at sunset, the chill of the Autumn air did not in the least dampen the ardor of the dancers.

The scene on the bowling green as viewed from the piazzas of the Club, was wonderfully picturesque, and expressions of admiration were heard on all sides.

The dancant was the first of a series to be given at Brae-Burn, and was under the able direction of Mr. Harry L. Ayer.

To Republican Voters

Newton's Republican Candidate for Middlesex County Commissioner, Frederic P. Barnes, should receive the votes of all Republicans in the County at the Primaries, as well as at the election, who are not satisfied with the methods employed by the COUNTY RING, (so called) and believe a change should be made by nominating and electing a business man entirely free from any RING RULE.

Newton has not been represented on this board for a great many years.

The following endorsement of representative citizens of Newton, submitted for your consideration.

We, the undersigned, hereby endorse Major Frederic P. Barnes, Newton, Mass., for the position of County Commissioner for Middlesex County, as being eminently fitted for membership on this board from his long business experience.

Major Barnes has been a resident of Newton for over forty years, having successfully held business positions of trust and responsibility. He had never been a candidate for Political office until last year, when he took out nomination papers for this same office, but was defeated the Primaries for the nomination.

His total vote was the second largest of the six Republican candidates. Newton gave him over 700 votes out of a total of about 900, carried Waltham and Watertown by 2 to 1, also other small cities and towns, and we believe he can secure the nomination and be elected this Fall.

EDITORIAL

The Republicans of this city will be called upon next Tuesday to help
select the party nominees for the governorship and other state and county offices, and a brief consideration of the various candidates may be of assistance.

Hon. Samuel W. McCall will be unopposed for the nomination for governor and the party is to be congratulated that it will have an able and experienced gentleman at the head of the ticket.

Mr. George H. Ellis of this city will also receive the party nomination for the state senate without a contest, and a continuation of his able and efficient service is assured.

Former State Senator Henry C.
Mulligan of Natick will also be unopposed for the nomination as a member of the governor's council.

For lieutenant governor there are three candidates, Hon. Augustus H.
Goetting of Springfield, the candidate of last year and a former member of the Governor's council, Mr. Elmer A.
Slevens of Somerville, our recent state
treasurer and Speaker Grafton D.
Cushing of the Massachusetts House,
a resident of Boston.

The logic of the situation seems to point to the selection of Mr. Goetting for this nomination. Mr. Goetting is an able business man, with a long and valuable experience in the governor's council and in state affairs in general and his remarkable run last year, when he led the Republican ticket by many thousands of votes indicates his popularity with the voters.
It will be no disparagement to the other candidates if Mr. Goetting is chosen. Geographically speaking, his selection would be a wise step for the Republicans to take.

For attorney general, Newton has a candidate in Mr. James M. Hallowell, who recently became a resident of Chestnut Hill. Mr. Hallowell has an excellent record as a lawyer and as an assistant attorney general under the late Hosea M. Knowlton, has a first hand knowledge of the office, which
none of the other candidates possess.
Newton voters can support their fellow citizen with confidence that he will reflect honor on the city, as well as on the state.

For state treasurer, Mr. Charles Burrill of Boston, the party candidate of last year, has by all means the greater qualification for the office and should receive the nomination.

For state auditor, Chairman Thurston of the Republican state committee has openly favored the nomination of Mr. Monette of Lawrence, on the ground that his opponent for the nomination is not the right man for the position. As the facts all seem to bear out Mr. Thurston's statement, Republican voters will make no mistake
in voting for Mr. Monette.

For secretary of the Commonwealth
there seems to be a division of opinion
among the party leaders, but as
Mr. Albert P. Langtry of Springfield has had nearly two years experience
in that office, prior to his defeat by the present Democratic incumbent, it would seem as if the best results
would be obtained by nominating him again for the place he so worthily filled.

Neither of the two candidates for Congress from this district, measure
up to the high standard set by Mr.
Weeks or Mr. Powers, who have held the office previously, but there is but little question that Mr. William H.
Carter of Needham will make a better
Congressman than his opponent from Brookline. Mr. Carter is an able, self made business man, and would accept-

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS

Republican City Committee Want To Know
Where Progressives Stand

THE REPLY

Sept. 15, 1914.

Mr. Horace McC. Bunker, Chairman
Mr. Clarence C. Colby, Secy.
Gentlemen:—

Your communication of the 14th received. We appreciate your alarm and apparent concession of our nominations.

We desire most emphatically that the citizens of Newton know all about us and what we represent, so that our frankness may be contrasted with the non-committal attitude of the other Republican candidates.

Those policies of the Republican party, which seem to us for the benefit of the rank and file of the people of Newton, will receive our hearty support. Policies like the recent Republican legislative co-operation with the plunderers of the New Haven and Boston & Maine stockholders, resulting in a loss of over a million dollars
to the people of Newton,—many of them widows and orphans,—we will not support.

We will support any man on the Republican ticket whose election we believe will be a benefit to the citizens of Newton and the State of Massachusetts.

We will not agree to vote for an unknown speaker of the House, Republican, Progressive, or Democrat. We are not such abject political slaves.

We are in favor of allowing the people of Newton and the State to decide matters affecting their public affairs
as they are about to do in this election, and as they have done many times heretofore; we are therefore in favor of the initiative and referendum,
in company with other Republican candidates now seeking nomination
in the Newton primaries.

If elected, we shall strive to carry out the principles and policies of the Republican Party of Lincoln and Sumner; and shall equally oppose the policies and lack of principles of that part of the Republican party represented by Barnes, Penrose, and Lorimer; we shall strive to serve the interests of all the people of Newton,
independent of corporate or boss control, to the best of our ability.

There are over 1500 citizens, usually voting for Progressive candidates,
enrolled as Republicans through no voluntary act of their own; and a larger number usually voting for Republican candidates. We believe that those voters together are competent to decide who will best serve their interests as candidates; and notwithstanding the threat of the loss of your "consideration," they alone will decide. We are perfectly content to remain in their hands. Very truly yours,

WILLIAM B. ARNOLD,
GEORGE H. MELLEN,

P. S. Is it not a fact that one of the other Republican candidates anticipating defeat in the primaries, is preparing to run under another label,
—with Democratic support?

MR. ALLEN'S RINGING REPLY

Newton Highlands, Sept. 17, 1914.
To Messrs. William B. Arnold
and George H. Mellen.

Gentlemen:

I have received from you this morning by special delivery a letter addressed to me jointly with the other candidates for the Republican nomination as Representative in which you ask:

"Will you abide the result of the Republican Primaries; or, if defeated, will you run under some other party label?"

Since the receipt of your letter, I have not had opportunity to confer
with the other Republican candidates, but, speaking only for myself, I will say that, if any three of the seven Republican candidates for the nomination are successful at the Primaries, I will do all in my power to secure their election.

Your candidacy in the Republican primary raises a different issue.
The Republicans of Newton are entitled to have three candidates placed in nomination who are really Republicans and who will support Republican principles just as you are pledged to support the principles of the Progressive party.

The voters in the Progressive party will have an opportunity to vote for three candidates who are out-spoken
champions of the Progressive policies and have not hesitated to assail the Republican party. Their nomination is assured because there is no contest, and every Progressive in Newton, whether enrolled as a Progressive or Republican, will have opportunity to vote for the men who have been chosen to lead the party. In all fairness, Republicans should have the same opportunity to vote for Republican candidates. You hope to secure the Republican nomination because many Progressives have neglected to enroll with their party and are still listed as Republicans. You think, because there are seven Republicans in the field and the Republican vote will be divided, that you have a chance to do this. If, by any chance, you shall succeed, you will, by the votes of Progressives, have prevented the Republicans from expressing their preference in their own party primary and will have left them with only one candidate.

Is it to accomplish such political ends that many high-minded men have joined your party? Is this a "square deal?" Do you wish to win

your battle by preventing your opponents from taking the field? Is not a good deal like the tactics of Barnes and Penrose and Lorimer whom you assail in your published
answer to the letter of the Republican City Committee, and who do not represent the ideals of the Republicans of this country or this Commonwealth?

The Republicans who are seeking the nomination in their party primary are as high-minded and have the same high ideals as the best men in your party, and they are not seeking
in this campaign to enter your primary and prevent you from becoming the standard bearers of your constituents.

My answer to your inquiry is that if, by the votes of the Progressive enrolled as Republicans you can prevent the nomination of three Republicans in their party primary, I will not help you to secure an election by the use of a Republican party label. On the contrary I will urge the two Republicans who receive the largest number of votes but are kept off the ballot by Progressive votes to run a Independent Republicans and will give them my hearty support.

Yours very truly,

J. WESTON ALLEN.

of the Democratic party. But do not be deceived in the present issue. These Progressive candidates are not in the Republican primary for the purpose of uniting the two parties. One of them has stated within a few weeks that he was totally opposed to Republican principles and policies, and his only object in seeking the Republican nomination is to receive an election to the House, where he will do everything in his power to defeat Republican measures.

Republican voters should carefully consider this situation and govern themselves accordingly.

The hearings before the Public Service Commission on the matter of a six-cent fare have been interesting and have thrown some light on the business management of a street railway corporation, but the remonstrances have failed to make out much of a case against the increase. Mr. Ballantyne, the attorney for the Company, has had the better of every argument, and has handled the railway side with skill and discretion.

While there is some question raised as to the advisability of including $400,000 of abandoned power property in the assets of the Company, and a criticism of the wisdom of operating by Edison power, the main facts of the Company's case are apparently proven and it is highly probable that a six-cent fare will soon be allowed by the Commission.

The possible increase in street railway fares due in part to recent orders of the Public Service Commission to lower the steps of electric cars, may be followed by a modification of that order so that a fifteen-inch instead of a seventeen-inch step might be utilized.

AFTER MANY YEARS

Mr. James H. Christie of Washington street, West Newton, has just received a check from the Canadian government for services rendered the King forty-eight years ago. Mr. Christie enlisted during the Fenian outbreak nearly half a century ago and this money is for ten days' service, with interest from that time.

POLITICAL NOTES

169 new voters were added to the voting list this week in anticipation of the state primary next Tuesday. Hon. Charles E. Hatfield will be chairman of the Committee on Permanent Organization of the Republican State Convention.

Water-Proofing Shoes.

Take equal parts of beeswax and mutton tallow and melt them together. While hot, apply to the soles of the shoes and the creases where the soles and upper join, being careful to fill in all the seams. The uppers can be treated in the same manner and the shoes will be perfectly waterproofed.

Remedy for Drowsiness.

Drowsiness during the day, if a person has slept well the night before, is often caused by indigestion. Often this is remedied by drinking something very hot like cocoa or coffee. The brain needs a mild stimulant. Lassi-tude of the body is not always an indication of illness or laziness.

Possibly Resent the Training.

"The trouble about husbands," remarked the square-jawed woman, "is that after you get them thoroughly trained to shut all the windows when it rains, and feed the bird and look after the rubber plant they get so sickly looking and discouraged they cast a gloom over the household."

Preserves Indian Relics.

Inscriptions and carvings on the rocks, the work of ancient Indian tribes, are being preserved by the government by means of an impression made in paper.

Feats of a Strong Man.

Well known in the old buffalo days of Saskatchewan was Joe Beupre, famed a thousand miles as the biggest eater in the north. Joe was not six feet tall, but he was a broad, deep, thick sort of man, with a hand like a ham and a stomach like nothing else in the world. He would eat an entire boxful of apples at one sitting and think nothing of it. Once, having encountered a gentleman who thought he was some enter, Joe consumed fifty-three pounds of buffalo meat in one day and topped off with a raw turnip, a six pound piece of pork, some lard and two loaves of bread. The best his competitor could do was thirty-seven pounds of meat. Beupre was so strong he never would fight any man for fear he should kill him. One day, while sledding on a narrow trail with an obstinate horse, he became angered, struck the horse on the head with his fist and killed it. He loosened the harness and threw the dead animal on one side of the trail. He never really knew how strong he was. Beupre died of rheumatism while still a young man.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Seventh Inning Stretch.

It is a simple ceremonial, but impressive, like all manifestations of the soul of a multitude. I need only close my eyes to call up the picture vividly. It is a day of brilliant sunshine, and a great crowd of men is seated in an open air, a crowd made up of all conditions, ages, races, temperaments and states of mind. The crowd has sat there an hour or more, while the afternoon sun has slanted deeper into the west and the shadows have crept across greenward and hard baked clay to the eastern horizon. Then, almost with a single motion—the time may be somewhere between 4 o'clock and 5 o'clock—this multitude of divers minds and tempers rises to its feet and stands silent, while one might count twenty perhaps. Nothing is said. No high priest intones prayer for this vast congregation. Nevertheless, the impulse of 10,000 hearts is obviously focused into a single desire. When you have counted twenty the crowd sinks back to the benches. A half minute at most and the rite is over.—Simeon Strunsky in Atlantic.

Virtue of Peanuts.

The oil of the peanut has a quieting effect on the pneumogastric nerve, the largest nerve supplying the stomach. Many nervous persons who like peanuts and do not know why, like them for this reason. They quiet the nerves of the stomach. These persons should eat a few fresh roasted peanuts after each hearty meal, as many nervous conditions are due to an irritation of the pneumogastric nerve, and the peanut oil acts as a sedative to this nerve. Of course the nuts must be crisp and well chewed and not too many taken. To get the best sedative effect a handful of the hot peanuts should be eaten just before retiring. This presupposes that the powers of elimination are in good repair. The peanut, a member of the pulse family, is nutritious and would clog the system if not eaten correctly, as it is almost equal to meat.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Putting It on the Map.

Captain Cook shows in his "Voyages" how some of the mouth filling place names on maps are evolved. "Off New Zealand there is an island called by the natives 'Matuaro.' One of my officers, having asked a native the name of that isle, the latter replied, 'Kematuaro,' putting 'the' before the name, as is the custom. The officer, hearing the sound imperfectly, repeated his question, whereupon the native repeated his reply, emphasizing it with the word 'oela,' which means 'indeed.' So in the logbook Matuaro was transformed into 'Kumettwarro-wela.'—London Globe.

He Rivalled Cicero.

Quintus Hortensius, the Roman orator, would have come down in history with great fame had any of his speeches been preserved. He died in the year 50 B. C. He was a soldier and statesman, and his mentality can be judged from the fact that he was a rival of Cicero.

His Future Assured.

"I don't know what to do with that kid of mine."
"Is he disobedient?"
"Not exactly. But whenever I tell him to do a thing he wants to debate the matter a long time."
"He will grow up to be a senator."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

To Remedy a Leaking Pen.

If one is troubled with a leaky fountain pen the application of a little soap to the threads of the screw will work magic. If the pen is emptied, thoroughly cleaned, filled and the soap applied there will be no more trouble until the pen needs filling again.—Exchange.

Looking Ahead.

Practical Father—Has that young man who wants to marry you any money? Romantic Young Lady—Money! He gave me a cluster diamond ring. Practical Father—Yes, I know. But has he any money left?—Exchange.

Verified.

He—And, judge, she's lost a lot of my money playing bridge. She—Don't believe him, judge. I don't know a thing about the game. He—That's right, judge.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Envious.

"Your wife is very fond of dumb animals."
"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "Sometimes I must wish I had never learned to talk."—Washington Star.

ALDERMEN MEET

Fix State Primary Hours from 6 A.M. to 8 P.M.

The first regular meeting of the aldermen after the usual summer vacation was held on Monday evening and the board transacted quite a large amount of business in about an hour, adjournment being reached before nine o'clock.

There were a large number of hearings, most of them apparently routine for only two attracted any attention. Mr. Trotter objected to Edison Light poles on Washington park and Forest Commissioner Colton also objected to any poles on the park itself. Mr. Geo. W. Marsh was not in favor of Telephone poles on Cross street on account of its narrowness and because all the people on the street now had service.

Permits to keep a garage and gasoline were granted to George E. Nichols, Washington street, Harris O. Poor, Valentine street, W. K. Corey, Commonwealth avenue, H. E. Locke, Boylston street, Wm. A. Sweet, Commonwealth avenue, Norman H. George, Gray Cliff road, Carrie T. Schirmer, Commonwealth avenue, H. D. Corey, Farlow road, R. P. Hains, Hunnewell avenue, Dr. W. D. Reed, Waverley avenue, Wm. O. Harris, Melrose avenue.

No one appeared on the laying out of Marshall street under the betterment act and $650 was appropriated for street construction for the same.

The Mayor sent in his appointments for election officers, and also recommended sale of land on Jackson road to John H. Grace and a transfer of money for the resurfacing of Beacon street, Waban.

On recommendation of the Forest Commissioner, moth work assessments amounting to some $14,000 were authorized and on recommendation of the Street Commissioner street sprinkling assessments of $25,000 were levied.

Petitions were received from T. D. Murphy for renewal of auctioneer license, F. A. Currier, for pool tables, Walnut street, T. F. Green for pool tables, Walnut street, W. H. Marston, Common Victualler, Walnut street, Furbush et al for sewer in Davis avenue, Costella et al for sewer in Lexington street, Tange et al for sewer in Wolcott park, Hannah Leary for sewer in Boylston street, E. A. Ransom for sewer in Ransom road, Patrick Condon for retirement under veteran pension, Mary J. Bicknell for soldiers' relief, A. T. Robinson for abatement of sewer assessment, West et al for sidewalks Newtonville avenue, Eliza Nagle for soldiers' relief, Ransom et al for laying out of Ransom road, Estes et al for sewer in Water-town street, and the Telephone Company for attachments and relocations in various streets.

On recommendations of committees $30 was paid to James Hutchins to settle a land damage claim, leave to withdraw granted on petitions for sewers in Adams avenue and for street sprinkling on Dedham street and Hancock avenue, $2100 transferred for the resurfacing of Beacon street, east of Chestnut street, Waban, water mains laid in Hereford road, Ransom road and Watertown street, hearings assigned for Oct. 5 on laying out of Ionia street, for the widening of Otis street and on laying a sidewalk on Harvard street, $29,817 was granted for city expenses to Oct. 31

called for the state primary Sept. 22, appropriations transferred for Temporary Clerks, Assessing Dept., and for payment of insurance on City Home, and $8. a month soldiers' relief granted Mary J. Bicknell.

The order for the State primary was issued by the State primary board at 4.30 P. M. He believed it discriminated against a large number of citizens who were unable to vote until they returned from work. He believed the primary was of more importance than the election and that everybody should take part in choosing party candidates. He favored the former hour of 12 M. to 9 P. M. Alderman Bennis thought the primary hours should be the same as election day, to avoid confusion. The elections, he said were complicated enough as they were, and it would be easier for the voter to have the hours the same. The City Clerk told the board that Boston was to vote from 6 A. M. to 8 P. M. this year and after some discussion the order was changed to these hours and adopted.

It is generally about this period of the year—after the Spring and Fall running—that your engine seems to lose some of its power. Leaky compression rings are generally the cause—and NOW is the time to have the engine overhauled BEFORE a ring breaks and causes some serious damage and trouble.

Engine work is handled right here—when we're through with the engine it is in the same or better condition than it left the factory in.

Questions, etc. gladly answered.

FOOT BALL

Schedule of Games and Prospects of N. H. S. Team

At Newton High School this year there seems to be little football interest, and so little it is out of 20 candidates have reported for the eleven. This number is probably the smallest that has ever turned out for an Orange and Black team, and Coach Dickinson, although not discouraged, is still of the opinion that enthusiasm will be aroused in a few days and more men will come out. Last year there were 44 men and a second team.

With 11 of last year's men gone, there is still eight men left to build a team around, but that is not the situation from the coach's standpoint—there must be extra men and plenty of them. The men lost by graduation are O'Neill and White, quarter-backs; Gardner, tackle; Chivers, Goodwin and Doyle, ends; Rice, Hyatt, Thompson and Jacobs, backs. The N men in school are: Charlie Brady, Stephen Cunningham (guard), Albert Turner, Chris Vachen, Hugh Meller, backs; Capt. Raymond Van Tassel, Thomas Comick, tackles; Frank Derney, centre.

There seems to be fairly good material for the line with Capt. Van Tassel, Cunningham, Comick, Frank Derney, Bryson, Harris and Stafford Brown. Last year's Brown and Nichols team. However, the development of the backfield is of more serious question and is one of the most perplexing problems Coach Dickinson will have to face on account of losing the entire last year's backfield. For quarter there are four candidates—William Wellman, Robert Stowell, Sibley, Little and Hay Carey; for half-backs there are but three promising men; at full, Brady, the 190-pound tackle, will be tried out, as he is a fast man and a good punter. Bryson and Harris, last year's ends, and two men which a lot is expected of this season, have not returned to school yet, and if they do return it is very likely they will be tried in the backfield. In the rest of the squad there are but few promising men, although Henderson, formerly of Middlesex School, may be a possibility.

Today another call for candidates will be given by Coach Dickinson and Manager Elliott Stickney, and it is hoped many more boys will come out for the eleven and help to maintain the name in schoolboy football that Newton has always had.

The football schedule promises to be one of the stiffest of recent years. It will open Sept. 28 with Quincy at Newton, and Waltham will be opposed in the closing contest. The list of games follows:

Sept. 28—Quincy High at Newton.
Oct. 2—Open.
Oct. 7—Needham at Newton.
Oct. 12—Boston Latin at Newton.
Oct. 16—Powder Point at Newton.
Oct. 24—Wellesley High at Newton.
Oct. 31—Somerville High at Newton.
Nov. 6—Brookline High at Newton (league game).
Nov. 13—Cambridge High and Latin at Cambridge (league game).
Nov. 18—Arlington High at Newton.
Nov. 26—Waltham at Newton (A.M.)

THE STORY OF AN AMERICAN REFUGEE

The Second Unitarian Church, Newton Centre, was thronged last evening when Rev. Dr. George E. Horr, president of the Newton Theological Institution gave an interesting lecture on his experiences in Europe during the present war. The proceeds from the meeting will be devoted to the Red Cross Society.

The meeting opened with remarks by the pastor, Rev. Alton H. Robinson, who introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Edgar Jacob Smits, the organist rendered several selections. Dr. Horr's lecture was as follows:

After three delightful days in Paris I took the train Wednesday morning, July 29, for Basle and Zurich by way of Mulhausen. The Paris papers had just said that the morning after the war. They were filled with reports of the Caillaux case, for the verdict had been reached late then night before. On the train there were several young French officers who had been summoned to the colors. I talked with some of them and found no one who believed that war was imminent. I was travelling alone, but I shall not soon forget the happy company of chance acquaintances that dined together and prolonged the table talk as we swept through beautiful Alsace over the very fields that in a few days were to be drenched with blood.

At Zurich there was no particular excitement, except that for two nights the streets were crowded and noisy. The afternoon of the 31st I was at work in the great town library on the Zwilling collection, and on returning to my hotel I felt that something unusual had happened. The streets were full of suppressed excitement. On stopping at a jeweller's to buy a trinket for a little American girl, the shop-keeper said that he could not make change, there was no money in Zurich. It had all vanished since morning.

The next morning I consulted the American consul and some of the local authorities and the general opinion was that Americans would do well to turn their backs toward France. For me that meant Paris, and without much delay I bought a first-class ticket on the famous train that sweeps across Europe from Vienna to Paris. But something happened, and another train was made up at Zurich, after a prodigious period of waiting. At last we were off, and I found myself on a trip, but at Basle every one was dazed out, and another train was made up after a three hours' wait.

As luck would have it, in the station at Zurich I fell in with a gentleman whom I will simply call Monsieur. The conversation which began in French soon shifted off into English, of which he had a perfect command. In the long wait at Basle we dined together. Little did we then imagine that it was to be our last meal for nearly two days. Our party was made up of Monsieur and two American ladies, the wife and daughter of a well-known New York broker, and a young woman, a Belgian officer's wife. We had counted on reaching Paris late that evening, but the Mulhausen route had been closed. Near Belfort, the great French fortress, we were told that it was probable that we would be detained, perhaps imprisoned, for days, but the plans of the railway officials were evidently subject to change, and slowly we were carried over the frontier. Were the shots we heard at Belfort the exchanges between the German and French outposts of which we read two days later in Paris?

I do not think any one of us could tell how the night passed. We certainly did not sleep and did not talk. Over us hung the fear of detention and the enormous discomfort to the women. The young Belgian officer tried to comfort his wife. He sat with his arm about her and they clasped hands. She was a singularly lovely woman. I shall never forget the pathos of her eyes as she fastened her gaze on her husband.

It occurred to me that some show of sympathy on the part of a stranger might not be unwelcome. They spoke no English, but any mistakes in my French did not count. They were glad to tell their story. They had only been married two months, and now her husband was to leave her, summoned to Liege. I cannot think of that young officer and his wife without emotion, and at our parting the lips of us all trembled and our eyes moistened. I seldom have been more thankful than when they both assured me that I had brought them the worst fears were realized. He must have reached Liege to find that storm of death.

The next day, Sunday, August 2d, how did it pass! All day long we rode through the fairest parts of France. Thousands of acres of wheat, ready for the cutting or already cut, waiting to be stacked. The yield of wheat per acre is incredibly larger than anything we know in America.

From early morning soldiers began to crowd into our train. The first-class compartments fared rather worse than the rest. They crowded the cars, sat on the floor or stood up. Every soldier seemed to have a long loaf of bread, which he backed off with a dirk knife. All persisted in keeping their knives open, and when the train lurched, as it did most of the time, you had to be spry to avoid an ugly cut. As the wine they carried began to take effect, the soldiers became more boisterous and careless.

It was hell. Fortunate the women who knew no French! Ten o'clock Sunday night we pulled into Paris at the Gare de l'Est. The station was filled with baggage, great mountains of it. I doubt if our ladies ever will get their trunks. Certainly I do not expect to see mine.

Wednesday morning when I left Paris it was full of life and gaiety. That Sunday night it seemed as if a plague had struck it. The lights were half out and the streets silent. Think of it, ten o'clock of a Sunday night! There seemed to be no chance whatever of getting a cab, and all we four had was in our heavy suitcases. Monsieur was equal to the emergency. With perfect good humor he subsidized a street Apadie to get us a taxi, and in two minutes we had one. Among the many services this gentleman rendered me was his advice, while we were waiting at Basle, to exchange our paper money and checks for English gold. It was most fortunate, and I was able to help more than one fellow American out of a tight place. Just before I left Paris on Monday I had the pleasure of entertaining my friend at the best dejeuner I could secure and he drove with me to the station to bid adieu. But I am ahead of my story. Paris on Monday, Aug. 3d, was only the shadow of itself. The great shops were closed. The streets were practically deserted. The cheerful little hotel where I stop was as gloomy as a funeral. The proprietor told me he did not see how he could keep open. His waiters and cooks had all gone to the war. Even the Cafe de la Paix, on the best corner for a restaurant in the whole world, was shut, and the door bore the legend, "The proprietor has gone to the front."

I did not have the discomforts of securing passage to America that many of my countrymen experienced. I had a ticket on the Hamburg-American Line, but it was evident that no German steamship would sail. So I was at the French Line office early Monday, and had no trouble in securing passage on the crack liner, "France." To be sure I had only a second-class berth, but proper negotiations resulted in a transfer in due time. Neither did I "share in the cattle car experiences," capacity six men and forty horses," that have been widely reported. The truth was I did not wait until Tuesday morning, but I took the train Monday afternoon, having overheard the conversation of some of the railway officials, and I rather wanted to stop over at Rouen to accept the invitation of one of the priests of the cathedral to make him a visit. As matters turned out, that was not practicable, for our train, which left Paris at half past three in the afternoon, did not reach Rouen until late in the evening.

From Rouen to Harve—three hours—I had the whole first-class compartment to myself. The lights were low, and it was a trifle lonesome, but not nearly so much so as the arrival at Harve, between one and two in the morning in a pouring rain. I must have been about the only through passenger from Paris. I roused a sleepy, half-drunken cabman to take me to Frascati, but the Frascati, about two miles off, was closed, and every other hotel I had ever heard of or read about was crowded so that not another person could be taken. A liberal tip, however, and the cold and rain sharper than my cabby's wiles, I was soon in my room. I was in a state of mind to be glad of a place indeed, neat, sweet and wholesome. At three in the morning I slipped into a clean bed with Francois bidding me good night, and asking would Monsieur take his coffee in bed in the morning.

A call next morning on Mr. Osborne, our consul at Harve, straightened out things as far as I was concerned and put me in the way of helping some of my less fortunate compatriots. The only criticism I have to make on Mr. Osborne is that he should have had a bigger United States flag. Some one should send him one. I think the recording angel gave me a good mark that morning for my help to American school teachers and other stranded women.

she soberly devoted herself to the great task of patriotism. Today France is drained, absolutely drained, of her male population to defend her soil. The devotion of the women to the great cause is most touching. As a French lady of rank said to me, "Oh, Monsieur, you must understand that France is called upon to risk everything today. We must not hold back anything. We must give our husbands, our sons, our brothers, ourselves, for France."

When the British Admiralty and the French Minister of Marine decided to permit the "France" to sail, the gloom that had settled down on the ship was lifted in a moment. You could not have found a happier company anywhere than the fourteen hundred men and women, most of them Americans, who knew that they were homebound. We half expected the Statue of Liberty to wave her torch in welcome as we came up the Narrows. Every American could say:

Oh, London is a man's town, with power in the air,
And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair,
And it's great to loaf in Venice,
And it's fine to walk in Rome,
But when you talk of living
There's no place like home.

NEWTON NOW HAS A FINE AMBULANCE

The city of Newton is the latest place to increase the efficiency of its hospital corps because of the introduction of a gasoline motor carriage, replacing an electric vehicle. It is a combination first-aid car, ambulance and general hospital conveyance.

Officials, after viewing the outfit, said the pleasure of riding in such a car would be enhanced and that the addition of the new automobile might increase the number of patients. The Newton authorities, however, claim that the increased expense for hospitalization will be offset in numerous ways—the whole list of things that count. They did not leave a point uncovered in making the selection between the various types of vehicles, and demonstrated a saving to the city that interests taxpayers. The ambulance is made up with a roomy closed body, electrically lighted, having ample windows for light and air, with doors on the side and rear, and mounted on a Packard "2-38" chassis. It has a gong, powerful searchlights, will climb almost any hill encountered on high gear, and is capable of great speed, with perfect comfort over rough going, a feature which doctors and nurses alike consider of prime importance.

Alvan T. Fuller, who received the order for the Newton Hospital ambulance, has remarked that he did not find it difficult to create an interest, because motor vehicles are known to have been developed to a high state of perfection, and then again they do not run up bills of any sort during the periods of non-use. Mr. Fuller, when asked whether a large car of this type was easier to handle, replied, "Absolutely. It can turn in a radius of 22 feet easier and quicker and stop in a shorter space than any other vehicle going at half the speed. The keynote of all agencies moving for public safety in speed, and this ambulance has the great advantage of speed in getting started, in responding to a call, in avoiding traffic so as to reach the destination quickly, and it sustains its speed for an indefinite period. "The trouble has not always been in exceeding the speed limit beyond rivalry by other vehicles, but in getting an automobile hospital ambulance that would be practical under all conditions. The average physician considers the firm, which has solved the hospital problem for rapid, quiet, smooth-running and reliable transportation of great importance."

The residents of Newton will still have the clang of the ambulance gong, but the beat of the horses' hoofs and the lumbering of a slow moving electric vehicle will no longer be heard.

STREET RAILWAY FARES

Editor of NEWTON GRAPHIC:

With your kind permission I desire to appeal to the residents of our city in the following manner, to wit, Citizens of Newton:

Do you desire a 6c street car fare throughout the entire city, instead of the present rate? Also, do you wish to pay 7c for your transfers? This is what the management of our railway system is asking permission of the Public Service Commission at 1 Beacon St., Boston, to grant them to establish at once.

Do you wish to be able to ride upon the cars between any two points in the city for a single fare, or do you desire to pay double, and in certain cases treble that amount?

Do you realize that you are now obliged to pay 11c for many of your rides within the city in which you live?

Do you know that the Public Service Commission has been hearing complaints relating to the proposed increase in fares upon our cars, making the minimum charge 6c, and the transfer charge 7c?

Do you know that only TWO residents of our large city of forty thousand souls appeared before the Commissioners and registered a protest? Do you know that these meetings held in the rooms of the Commissioners, were thronged with Newton St. Ry. officials, Boston Elevated officials, men from the office of Kidder Peabody Co., lawyers hired by all three of the aforesaid corporations, and others whose interests were solely akin to the desires of the street railway company?

Do you realize that Waltham, Belmont, Lexington, Needham, Wellesley and other places, sent commissioners, city or town officials and others to fight the street railway men and their plans?

What interest do you imagine the Public Service Commission have in the people of Newton, when but TWO of the entire number of patrons of the railways in that city, appear at the meetings held in their behalf, and for their protection?

Under the circumstances, can you blame the Commission if they grant the request of the railway management, and thus permit them to raise the schedule of fares, as well as to curtail the transfer privileges?

When will you, Mr. Newtonian, be willing to stand shoulder to shoulder with your neighbors and fight community evils like this one that is being forced upon us? What is the matter that you will not give a few hours of your time now, in order to enjoy future privileges which are being literally stolen from beneath your eyes?

Come out! NOW! Write the Public Service Commission AT ONCE! Register your protest! Tomorrow may be too late! Do it today! Do not let our city gain a reputation for being the abiding place of men and women who do not dare to stand up for their rights.

You will find every member of the Public Service Commission a most fair-minded man, and all that is needed to stop this robbery game which the officials of the street railways are trying to "put over" on us, is to "get busy AT ONCE and protest. DO IT NOW!

INCREASED ENROLLMENT

The total enrollment in the public schools, which opened Monday, was only a slight increase over last year. The total number of pupils was 7674, which is 191 more than 1913. In the High Schools alone there are 1930 students, these being divided as follows: Classical High 850, Technical High 700 and Vocational High 380. This number will no doubt be further increased as the students return from their vacations.

GILMORE HAS "LEWIS VI."

Forms New Company and Will Open Salesroom at 92 Massachusetts Avenue

Although it is only a month ago that E. A. Gilmore withdrew from the local automobile field, when The Whittier-Gilmore Company, of which he was treasurer and general manager, sold its business to the Chalmers Motor Company of Massachusetts he has already formed a new company, to be known as the E. A. Gilmore Company, of which he is president and treasurer. This new company has taken the agency in Boston and eastern Massachusetts for the "Lewis VI," manufactured by the L. P. C. Motor Company in Racine, Wis. Salesrooms at 92 Massachusetts avenue, formerly occupied by the Velle Motor Vehicle Company, have been secured, and the new models will be on exhibition in Boston next week though the formal opening will not take place until Monday, Sept. 14.

MR. E. A. GILMORE

The "Lewis VI" is named after William Lewis, one of Racine's wealthy men and one of the earliest manufacturers of motor vehicles in this country. Associated with Mr. Lewis are Rene Petard and James Cram, the former the designer of the car and the latter the sales manager of the company. Mr. Gilmore, in looking for a car for his new company to handle, sought what his long experience in the automobile business had taught him the public wants—a car properly designed and manufactured by a thoroughly reliable company, and one whose performance over all kinds of roads and hills would be superior to anything in its class, and equal to many cars selling for two or three times as much. After a thorough investigation he felt there could be no doubt of the standing of the L. P. C. Motor Company or of the car itself.

The "Lewis VI" is made in only one model. It has a six-cylinder monobloc motor, 3½ by 6. The motor is of the L-head type, all moving parts being fully enclosed, with the hood made easily demountable for convenience in inspection and cleaning. The car is fast and is a wonderful hill climber. Lubrication is both by force and splash, the oil being positively fed to every part of the engine, clutch and transmission from a reservoir constantly replenished by the flywheel, which performs the office of pump. The clutch is of the multiple disc type of large diameter, and the transmission of selective type, with three forward speeds and reverse. The entire power plant is carried in the frame on these points, thus relieving it from any strains due to accidental distortion.

The front axle is of the I-beam type, drop-forged, specially heat-treated, and the rear axle in the Lewis Special full floating pressed-steel type, with over-size gears and large bearings throughout. The car has a wheelbase of 135 inches with a 36x4 inch wheels, equipped with Goodyear straightedge tires, non-skid on rear. Ignition is by magneto, and starting and lighting by the Remey system. The car has left-drive and centre control and is equipped with speedometer, top, windshield, electric horn, robe and foot rails, tools, etc.

SIX CENT FARES

M. S. Williams of Newtonville appeared before the Public Service Commission last week Thursday afternoon at the hearing on the proposed increase in fares on the Newton and Waltham lines of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company. He criticised the methods of issuing transfers on certain lines. Chairman Macleod finally requested that Mr. Williams submit his plans for improvement in writing.

George Sweetser, representing the town of Wellesley, was heard in the morning. Mr. Sweetser asked that General Manager Cox of the street railway company furnish figures on the number of passengers carried for the year ending June 30, 1914. Commissioner Anderson in discussing a point which had been raised before, expressed the opinion that the commission has the power to regulate fares irrespective of restrictions imposed before or after 1898. He said the question was open to argument by counsel for towns which have brought forward evidence of orders of location containing limitations regarding the amount of fare.

Henry H. Bond, representing Waltham, cross-examined Manager Cox and Amos Taylor, representing Belmont, brought out the fact that there was a 1700-yard stretch in Belmont which cost a passenger from Newton an extra nickel. Mr. Cox said that the stretch was rented from the Boston Elevated at a monthly rate of about $68.

George P. Willard, president of the Waltham Board of Trade, questioned Mr. Cox regarding values of car barn properties. When he asked some questions regarding Mr. Cox's automobile and garage, Mr. Cox defied anyone to show that his family rode in his business car.

"PAGEANT OF THE CHARLES RIVER"

Interesting and Picturesque Affair At the Lower Falls On Saturday

On Saturday afternoon, Sept. 19th, over a thousand people assembled on the Metropolitan Park Reservation by the river at Newton Lower Falls to see the "Pageant of the Charles," given by the Community Club under the direction of Mrs. Anna Eastman Frost. The lines and episodes were written by Isabelle Fiske Conant. The weather conditions were perfect and the high hill with the old grey aqueduct and the winding river made a wonderful background for representing in attractive symbolism, the historic spots on the Charles river.

From the moment the Spirit of the Present, Miss Edith Early, president of the Club, stepped across the green and gave the Prologue in a clear, resonant voice until the whole cast appeared in the final episode of the winding river, the audience watched with keen interest, often too absorbed to applaud.

After the Spirit had told her story with its symbolism of human life, the Reflections came dancing forth, clothed in violets, yellows and browns. The Arches then formed and the Reflections danced through them until wearied, they sank to the ground and were refreshed by the Mists, nine little girls in soft grey costumes, who came down over the aqueduct in a happy spontaneous dance. The Reflections stirred as the echo rang from the hillside and ran to follow it.

The little men of the mountain were next discovered frolicking but they ran away when the fairies appeared. In the second episode, the maiden, Wabun-Annung, Miss Margaret Dodd, was wooed by the East Wind and the lovers were carried to the stars by six club girls in a star dance. As the maiden was stricken by the river bank, Grief's "Sunshine Song," was sung from the aqueduct by Miss Marion Niles.

The electrification of the railroad was especially interesting to Newton people. The Spirits of Smoke, taken by Mrs. P. B. Prendergast and Miss Remnitz swept before them the clouds, ten little fellows in bright red, who rolled over the hill in the river. Smoke clouded the Spirit of the River until she was freed by Electricity and danced with jovous freedom. Mrs. Frost took the part of the River Spirit throughout the pageant.

Perhaps the strength of the pageant was in the Colonization episode. John Cunningham, as Lief Ericson, with his band of Norsemen, paddled down the river in earnest and was received by the Spirit of Norumbega and guided up the hill. Miss Elizabeth Chandler, as Norumbega, with her arms outstretched to the kneeling Norsemen made one of the most striking pictures in the pageant. The Perkins Institution on the Charles was represented by twenty of its own little children who were led across the green by Catherine Cooney, symbolizing the figure of Light. The bell ringers danced joyfully before them, ringing the bells which were in tone like the big tower bell.

In the following episode eight members of the Elinor Gregg Club of Waltham gave a clock dance, led by the figure of Industry.

The River Gardens of the Old Homesteads made a gay picture with roses and hollyhocks, butterflies and bumble bees, all brought into the garden by the fourteen gay little fairies.

Sam Lawson, the village "heer-dow-ell," immortalized in "Old Town Folks" was enlivened by Mr. W. Lee Burchstead who loomed in the garden and told stories to the merry school children until the indignant school teacher called her children and shook her fists at lay Sam. Then the Sun, who was Miss Laura West, entered the garden in a brilliant orange costume and the flowers followed her rays.

As the entire cast formed the winding of the river, America appeared on the hill and behind her Europe, bound by the shackles of war. As America freed Europe, she unfurled the American flag and the entire audience and cast rose to the Star Spangled Banner. The performance showed what can be accomplished by a community working together and the spirit on Saturday was only a reflection of the spirit which accompanied the whole undertaking.

Miss Marion H. Niles, director of the club, was chairman of the pageant and was ably assisted by Miss Edith Early, Miss Evelyn Robbins, Miss Gertrude Cahill and Miss Martha Doonan.

The grounds were in charge of Mr. R. B. Prendergast to whom the Community Club is most grateful for his efficient support. He was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. David Warren.

The Impromptu Club of Brookline under the direction of Mrs. Walton V. Crocker, sang four songs with a beautiful blending of tone.

The participants included: Reflections—Margaret Anderson, Mary Anderson, Alice Caine, Nora Cooney, Ethel Cooper, Madeline Dodge, Edith Early, Agnes Flynn, Elizabeth Gilder, Mabel Hovland, Helen Warren, Molly Williams.

Little Men of the Hillside—Carl Barkhouse, Richard Corcoran, Peter Dunn, Arthur Manning, Joseph Smith, Joseph Tangney, Robert Taylor, James Thompson.

Arches—Dorris Armstrong, Mary Cooney, Anna Higgins, May Howard, Josephine Pendergast, Helen Pendergast, Katherine Pendergast, Annie Flynn.

Mists—Annie Cooney, Bessie Cooney, Jennie Cooney, Mary Delaney, Alice Donahue, Helen Flynn, Anna Gleason, Marie Laffie, Alice Murphy.

In the second episode Longfellow's legends of the river were recalled. Ada Blake appeared as Wabun, the East Wind, and Margaret Dodd as Wabun-Annung, an ancestor of Hiawatha.

The cast: Lief Ericson, John Cunningham; Norumbega, the Spirit of Colonization, Elizabeth Chandler. Stars—Nora Cooney, Madeline Dodge, Mary Downey, Mary Slamin, Nellie Slamin, Florence Taffa. Norsemen—Herbert Bancroft, Harold Brown, Archie Connolly, Lewis Connolly, Raymond Cunningham, Charles Elliot, Philip Enholm, John Higgins, Joseph Spring, Clarence Taylor.

Electrification of the Railroad was the title of the third episode; the smoke overpowering the Spirit of the River and Electricity, the Spirit of Invention, raised and restored the River Spirit, until it shone and sparkled. Ray Early was Electricity. Catherine Perkins represented Light and Mrs. Roland B. Pendergast and Miss Lella Remnitz were Spirits of the Smoke.

A clock dance was given in the next episode by the Waltham Girls' Club, many of whom are employees of the Watch Company. The participants were Nellie Flanagan, Margaret Murphy, Lillian Peck, May Sullivan, Rose Thompson, Mae Wolcott.

Another episode, "The River Gardens of the Old Homestead," comprised several beautiful dances. The school teacher was Mary Thompson, W. Lee Burchstead was Sam Lawson, the Sun was Laura West and other participants were: Dorothy Barry, Grace Barry, Marie Collins, Dorothy Cooper, Eleanor Cooper, Helen Cooper, Pamela Gifford, Mary Harrington, Ethel.

LARGE VOTE AT PRIMARY

Bothfield, Weston and Allen Win Republican Nominations For Representatives In a Close Contest

The state primary in this city on Tuesday was exceedingly well attended as compared with the report from other cities, a total of 2575 votes being cast, of which 2079 were Republican, 371 Democratic and 125 Progressive. The large vote, which was more than double that of a year ago, was undoubtedly due to the interest taken in the contest for the three Republican nominations for representatives. Mr. Bothfield, as was expected, was renominated with a total of 1405 votes, while Thomas Weston, Jr., of West Newton with 803 and J. Weston Allen of Newton Highlands with 790 received the other two nominations. The also included J. C. Brimblecom with 701, George R. Pulsifer with 575, Howard Emerson with 515, Frederick W. Cobb with 332, while the two Progressives seeking the Republican nomination were last, George H. Mellen with 307 and William B. Arnold with 305.

The city followed the general lead of the state in giving Speaker Cushing a 2 to 1 lead over Col. Goetting, a 4 to 1 lead for Langtry for secretary, a large majority for Burrill for treasurer, and the same for Cook for auditor. It gave Mr. Halliwell of this city a fine endorsement for attorney general, while William H. Carter of Needham had a walkover with N. A. Francis of Brookline for the nomination for Congress. Former Senator Henry C. Mulligan of Natick was unopposed for councillor and Mr. George H. Ellis of West Newton received the nomination for state senator without a contest. For County Commissioner, Major Frederic P. Barnes of West Newton had double the vote given to the present chairman of that Commission Hon. Levi S. Gould of Melrose.

There were but two contests on the Democratic ticket, Congressman John J. Mitchell winning a renomination with ease from McCasters and McCarthy having a long lead in a field of six candidates for County Commissioner.

There were no contests in the Progressive party.

On account of the late hour for closing the polls, the returns were not all received at City Hall until after midnight, ward 3 being the last at 12:45.

The vote for each office follows.

Republican.

ENJOYABLE FIELD DAY

Newton Upper Falls A. A. Entertain 3000 On Saturday

The Field Day given by the Newton Upper Falls Athletic Association last Saturday afternoon and evening was one of the most successful affairs ever held in this community, there being over 3000 people present during the afternoon and evening.

Dancing was indulged in from three to eleven P. M., wrestling matches, sports, folk dances, and two ball games were the attractions during the afternoon. The first ball game was between the Upper Falls Girls' Play-ground team and a girls' team from the Nonantum Playground which was won by the Upper Falls Girls. After the girls' game the Newton Upper Falls A. A. and Needham A. A. took the field and a red hot game was played up to the 7th inning Upper Falls leading 2 to 1, but Needham went to pieces in the 8th and the home team scored 10 runs putting the game on ice.

The following committee had charge of the affair: Publicity Committee, Thomas E. Lees, T. J. Sullivan and W. H. Halliday; Grounds Committee, Walter Dugan, Fred Fontenay, John Herlihy, James Doane, Arthur Rum-mery, Charles Duval, John Daniels, James Stanton, John Green, Adam Miller, Edward Barrett, Patrick Stanton, and Patrick McGreevey; Entertainment and Features, Frank Pitts, James Gormley, David Osborne, William Hughes, William Halliday, Rep. T. W. White, Daniel Crowley, Frank McDonald, J. J. Mahoney, Halmer Call; Dancing and Music, William Kerrivan, Florence Crowley, Edward Donovan, M. V. Crocker, Joseph Green, John Daniels, William Kerr, Frederick Maloney and Arthur Rumrery; Sports, J. J. Mahoney, Walter Slattery, T. B. Durant, Martin Stanton, William Connors, William Halliday, John Buckley, D. Haggerty, T. J. Sullivan, John Herlihy, James Doan; Refreshments, Thomas E. Lees, William Kerrivan, James Estelle, J. J. Mahoney, William Bailey, Edward Donovan, Henry Tompkins, John Herlihy, Mr. Horgan and William Dyson.

The following ladies had charge of the different booths: Mrs. Charles Littlehale and Miss Fanny Littlehale, Ice Cream; Miss Annie Stanton and Miss Callanan, Orange Tree; Mrs. Thomas E. Lees, Mrs. Mowbray Trux and Mrs. Frank O'Hara, Candy Table; Grab Bag, Ideal Club.

The Refreshment Table was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Herlihy and the Misses Margaret, Mary and Alice Leary.

During the evening much enjoyment was taken in firing balls at the windows in the Little Red School house and dolls and the hoop las and other attractions kept the crowd busy until it was time to close.

The Men's League of the Immanuel Baptist Church will meet next Sunday noon for organization and to prepare for the year's work.

The program, which will be given Sunday noon in the church parlors will consist of a series of half hour talks upon the general subject, "The Bible: How It Came to Us and What It is Bringing Us." Mr. Henry Turner Bailey, former state supervisor of drawing will open the program Oct. 4 on the subject "The Ante-Biblical World," followed on Oct. 11 on "The First Seal" and on Oct. 18 on "The First Editor."

Each topic will be considered in the light of the latest conclusions of critical scholarship, illustrated by means of maps, charts, and blackboard sketches. Opportunity will be given for discussion.

One half-hour each month will be devoted to some topic of live interest outside the general subject of the series by Mr. Bailey.

The Massachusetts golf team easily won the annual golf match with Rhode Island on Saturday on the Brae-Burn Country links, winning fourteen of the fifteen matches played, 9 out of ten in singles and all of the five matches in foursomes.

The open amateur tournament of the Newton Golf Club last Friday and Saturday attracted a field of over 100 golfers from all parts of the state.

Mr. F. J. Jackson of the Scarborough G. C. was the winner of the prize offered for the low gross score, getting a 74. The best net trophy was won by Mr. E. J. Sears of the Albemarle G. C., with 63, while the prize for the second net went to Mr. D. McArthur of the home club, with a card of 90—24-66. In the best selected nine in 18 holes competition, Mr. Sears was also the victor.

A WORD OF THANKS

I desire to express my gratitude to the seven hundred and more Republicans who honored me with their votes for one of the three nominations for representative on Tuesday.To have landed in fourth place in a field with eight other active or able candidates, with only the assistance of a few personal friends, with no organized or systematic work in my behalf, and in spite of the well known prejudiced sentiment in the city that there should be a sectional apportionment of these nominations, is a result which I feel is highly complimentary to myself.I request my friends to give the successful candidates the same loyal support that I have already pledged them personally.

JOHN C. BRIMBLECOM.

The state primary on Tuesday brought out a large vote, the total of 2575 being nearly as large as the average city election. The Republican vote of over 2000 was due to the lively contest for the three nominations
for representatives, by a field of nine candidates. Representative Bothfield received the deserved compliment of the highest vote, as was expected, his endorsement by the other regular Republican candidates predicting this result. The winning of the other two nominations by Messrs. Weston and Allen was something of a surprise
altho both of them had by far the benefit of organized and systematic work in their behalf by a large number of personal friends. It was expected by the political wise-acs that these nominations would be captured by Messrs. Pulsifer and Emerson with a possibility that the editor of the GRAPHIC might be a factor. Mr.
Pulsifer was fifth and Mr. Emerson sixth in the final standing. The two Progressives were last in the race, Republicans evidently sizing up the situation with more than usual political sagacity. While an amalgamation of the two parties is a "consumation
devoutly to be wished", the two gentlemen who desired the Republican
as well as the Progressive nomination,
were not in the field on a platform of reconciliation.Mr. Hallowell, altho a new resident of the city received a handsome vote
in his unsuccessful campaign for the nomination for attorney general, and Major Barnes should feel highly flattered
in his splendid vote for County Commissioner.Newton followed the lead of the state in casting large majorities for the successful candidates for lieutenant governor, secretary, treasurer and auditor altho in the last nomination,
the party has not covered itself either with honor or glory. While it may be fashion, nowadays, to oppose even the slightest hint of dictation from members of political committees, yet
it should be remembered that sometimes these gentlemen have a far better knowledge of men and things than the average voter. The fact that the man who received the Republican nomination for auditor was repudiated
by a vote of three to one in the town
in which he recently resided is a straw which indicates that Chairman Thurston may have known what he was talking about in opposing Mr.
Cook. There is also a regrettable suspicion that racial and possibly religious feeling may have conspired to defeat Mr. Monette for this nomination. Taken from any point of view,Paul Revere Frothingham on the Transcript

Saturday, Sept. 26, 1914therefore, the party has evidently made a political blunder in its nomination for this office.The offer received by the mayor to buy the land now occupied by the old Armory on Washington street ought to be accepted without delay. It would transform an unproductive piece of property into one paying something in taxes. It would remove an eyesore
in the shape of the present unkept
looking building and as the land can be used only for commercial purposes,
it would add to the general business prosperity of the city. A quibble over a few cents in price for such a piece of property is far from good business.An interesting question has been raised at City Hall in the action of the board of health in ordering the abatement of a "wet land" nuisance,
under the statute, without an appropriation by the city government and which has been held up by the comptroller of accounts. Both the board of health and the comptroller can find statutory authority for their position,
and it is evidently another of those
many absurd and unnecessary requirements of the new and half baked municipal finance law.The editor of the GRAPHIC put quite a dent and almost a hole in the theory that the three representatives from this city must be chosen from different sections, regardless of fitness or experience.One of the humorous incidents of the primary was the one vote cast in Ward 5, for Hon. Seward W. Jones as a delegate to the Democratic state convention.

CORRESPONDENCE

Boston, Mass., Sept. 24, 1914.
To the Editor of the Graphic,
Newton, Mass.My dear Sir—
I wish to thank you for the manner in which you proffered the use of your columns to the candidates for Representative in the contest which closed last Tuesday.Your courtesies to your opponents
for the nomination were extended with generous impartiality, and the outcome of all primaries demonstrated, not only that your candidacy did not injure that of Mr. Bothfield, but that the objection raised on the ground that you and Mr. Bothfield came from the same ward, did not prevent you from receiving a splendid vote from all sections of the city.Yours very truly,
J. WESTON ALLEN.

HOME FROM EUROPE

Dr. H. H. Powers of Newton, head of the University Travel Bureau, arrived on the Canopic with a party of sixty-five persons and "without a scratch." The majority of Dr. Power's tourists were women who joined him at Liverpool in June."We made our journey leisurely across the Continent" said Dr. Powers, "keeping to our schedule, and suffering very little inconvenience.
We were in Heidelberg when war was declared and moved on to Italy according to previous arrangement.
Our reservations on the Canopic
were made two weeks before sailing on Sept. 10. There has been some crowding on the boat, but not more than could have been expected under the circumstances.My people kept their heads, altho I must say that among some Americans there was almost a panic.
Of course, conditions are not normal
in Italy by any means. The country is getting ready for war and will proceed against Austria when it appears that she can gain the most at the least cost. The people of Italy are as one man in their hostility towards Austria, and if the Italian government had decided to help the Germans, there would have been an immediate revolution. A man with three sons in the Italian army told me that if, through the course of events, they had gone forth with Germany to aid Austria, he would have been in Italy confidently expects to get control of the Adriatic."There seems to be enough food in Italy. It is true that the cost of food has advanced about ten per cent, but,
under the circumstances, this does not seem to be remarkable. Pressure, in this direction, is undoubtedly relaxing, for Italian commerce is now entirely free and the embargo on coal
has been lifted."If the allies shall be victorious in the present land engagements, it will shorten the war; and whether they shall be successful, the Germans are bound to lose eventually. It is inevitable, and with Germany beaten,
there will be a reduction of armament the world over."

WATSON-LINCOLN

Miss Alice Louise Lincoln, daughter of Mrs. Helen F. Lincoln, and J.
H. Cecil Watson of New York son of J. H. Watson M. P. of Winnipeg, were married on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. A. Smith, 2321 Washington street, Newton Lower Falls. Rev.
Ralph M. Harper, assistant rector of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Boston, officiated. The bride was attended by Miss Mabel E. Smith of Waltham, Miss Virginia Pierce of Rockport and Miss Alice Locke of Winchester, while Jeannette Smith,
niece of the bride, was flower girl.
Frederick Watson of Alberta, Canada, was best man and the ushers included Edward R. Lincoln of Wal-ham, Harry A. Smith of Newton Lower Falls and Nathan E. Smith of Waltham. Refreshments were served under a large canopy on the lawn and
the occasion was al fresco in character. An orchestra furnished music.
Mr. and Mrs. Watson will spend their honeymoon in Montreal, Quebec and Vinnipeg. They will return home in Yonkers, N. Y., after Nov. 1.

ANOTHER POINT OF VIEW

How the Situation in Europe Is Considered In GermanyMrs. Sara Murray Jordan, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Murray of this city, and the wife of Dr.
Sebastian Jordan, a professor in the University of Munich, has written
the following article in regard to the German point of view of the present war in Europe. Mrs. Jordan was a student at No. University of Munich and has resided in a suburb of that city since her marriage.GERMANY BEFORE AND AFTER THE OUTBREAK OF THE WARIt may be of interest to the readers of the Graphic to hear from one who has lived among the German people
for the last twenty months something of their state of mind and feelings at the present crisis in their history. It would seem that the reports received by the people of the United States concerning the causes and progress of the European war have been by no means impartial or complete. Let me tell, therefore, how the people of Germany thought and felt and acted during the last week of July and the first weeks of August, 1914. The news of the murder of the crown prince of Austria-Hungary and his wife had been received by the Germans with some consternation and horror. And when they were convinced that this assassination was a part of a Pan-Slavic movement, authorized by the Serbian government and supported by Russia, their consternation increased as they asked themselves: "If Russia
is behind this business, isn't it possible that Germany too may be entangled?" None seriously believed that it could really come to war,
but there was tense excitement during those last days of July while the Emperor was holding telegraphic communications with the Czar of Russia in an attempt to localize the difficulties between Austria-Hungary and Servia. Perhaps the general public here does not know that during the very days when the Czar was pretending to be interested in the keeping of peace and was sending ambiguous replies purported to deceive the German government, serious preparations for war were being made by Russia against Austria-Hungary and against the German frontiers of Germany. The people of Germany, while approving heartily of the peace-loving attitude of the Emperor,
were yet afraid that these commendable efforts would only result in a disastrous delay in mobilization.
More than one sane wholesome-minded man was heard to say: "I'm a bit afraid that by trying to avert
the miseries of war, we are endangering our own existence." When it finally became clear to the government of Germany that their confidence was being betrayed and that Russia had mobilized her entire army, and that Germany was facing the threatening state of war. And when no reply was received to Germany's demand that Russia stop, every measure of war against them, the mobilization of the German army was ordered. The seriousness of the situation was now clear to all, though
one still heard on all sides the remark: "Something must still happen
to prevent such a calamity as war." Instead of the question: "When are you off for your vacation?" which men of all stations in life, from military officer to judge, had asked eachother a few days before, they now
asked: "On which day are you called in for service?" About twenty days were necessary for the mobilization
and the marches to the frontiers.
Meanwhile France in reply to Germany's definite inquiry whether she would remain neutral in the event of a Russo-German war had declared that she would do that which her interests dictated. Shortly afterwards without declaration of war, French soldiers stepped over the German frontier and began skirmishing. On the fourth day of Germany's mobilization, England rendered Germany
speechless with astonishment by her declaration of war. England's reason was an alleged breach of neutrality on the part of Germany, against Belgium. But Germany had considered Belgium no longer neutral
because of the presence of French officers at Liege and of the preparations which were being made by the Belgians to pass through Belgium on their way to Germany. Then Germany began to feel that it had not been a chain of chance happenings, but that there was an organized movement on the part of her enemies to crush her progress and destroy her. Inspired by the feeling that it was to be a fight for a just and righteous cause, for their very existence as a nation, the men who were physically fit went to their appointed posts on the appointed days
and the women brave as the men cheered them on their way and then went back to their posts to wait and pray and do their woman's work in the Red Cross and for the poor families left behind. The mobilization took place without the slightest confusion, millions of men appeared at their appointed posts on time and were assigned to duty here and there. The gray uniforms and boots were made, thousands every day. The harvests were reaped and stored by the Boy Scouts in cases where the men had been called into service. In the large cities such as Munich, there were few external signs of war—a slight rise in the price of imports, but in general the prices just the same as before the war. In fact, in some restaurants a cheaper and simpler dining was offered to help those in straitened circumstances. Many owners of houses promised to demand
no rent until after the war. Everyone was filled with the desire to help
and people were not surprised to read newspaper notices like the following
one from a photographer: "In order to help a little, I offer to take for soldiers, without means, free photographs for the use of their families." Perhaps the second greatest surprise for the people of Germany (second to the surprise caused by the declaration of war by England) was the knowledge that the press and the American people of the United States
were in great measure harshly misleading, but rather anti-German. They themselves are so thoroughly convinced that the necessity of war was thrust
upon them and that nothing remained for them but to fight for their life as a nation, that they relied most certainly upon the moral support of the American people. Now that we know the whole truth is one day
known, the fair-mindedness and justice of the American people will recognize their struggle as a just one.

THE NEWTON CITY BAND

Just a word as to the Newton City Band, which has just been organized and had its second rehearsal at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium of Newton (which was very kindly offered for rehearsals by the representatives of that organization). There were nearly forty (40) musicians present and it is the intention of the conductor to select from that number on or about twenty-eight musicians who will represent the Newton City Band.I do not believe it is possible for any one to know or even dream of the many obstacles that confronted me in trying to get together the number as mentioned as hereinbe-fore. There were all kinds of ridiculous questions asked, there were all kinds of people who applied for positions as members of the band, and there were many who told me how
the band should be run and managed without even knowing or asking me
my possible attitude regarding the same.I personally left between 100 and 150 notices in different stores throughout our city calling attention to the fact that members were wanted for this Newton City Band and one would be surprised at the different remarks of some of the store keepers,
together with those who happened to be present when I called. The most of them wanted to have a band and were pleased at the selection made
by me, namely the Newton City Band,
but they very politely informed me
that it was utterly impossible to do what I was trying to do, as many had tried before and the best I would get was "pains for my labor," but notwithstanding all this I kept on trying and at last I succeeded in getting together a representative number of musicians, as above mentioned.I would state that the Band is not ready for business at the present, but I trust that ere the Winter months
are gone, I will be ready and willing to assure the people of Newton that we are prepared to accept business
and I feel confident that the citizens will respond with their ever-helping hand.I shall never forget the first time
I met his Honor our beloved Mayor
Edwin O. Childs, Jr. Being practically a new comer in Newton, I had never had the pleasure of meeting
his Honor, so I asked my son, who was acquainted with him to invite him to call at the store, which he did
one evening during the initiatory
steps of the formation of the Newton City Band. Words are inadequate to express my true feelings at this time
at the remarks made by his Honor
and his endorsement of the situation which I had laid before him as to theformation of the Band and its purposes. It appeared to appeal to him from the very start, he said that he would do everything in his power to help me in any way that he could and at this time he honored me by enrolling his name to the Honorary membership of the Newton City Band.The spirit which helped to organize and form the Band, rested entirely in its leader and conductor, urges him to greater activities in behalf of the welfare of the citizens of Newton. It is now his intention and wish to inaugurate an old home week in Newton, the same to be held in the Spring of 1915. I understand it is many years since anything of this kind has ever happened in Newton.The leader and conductor of Newton's band is ready and willing to do all in his power to make this an entertaining and memorable occasion.
He looks to the citizens of Newton
to lend their aid and support to further this cause, a cause which should certainly appeal to every patriotic citizen.This is a movement to promote good fellowship and better business
among the citizens of our beloved
City of Newton.The leader of the Newton City Band most sincerely invites the citizens to co-operate with him. Newton should have an Old Home Week and let the people of the good Old Bay State realize that Newton stands for the promotion of business, good fellowship to all and should always be recognized as one of the leading cities of New England.CHARLES G. WHITCOMB, Musical Conductor,
Newton City Band.

PRAISES MAYOR

To the Editor of the Graphic:—
In behalf of the members of the Albemarle Golf Club I wish to record
the appreciation which our members have for the prompt attention given by Mayor Childs to a request for the improvement of Cheese-Cake Brook
which flows through Albemarle road.
This Club planned to have an Open Tournament on September 25 or 26
and were anxious to have the parkway cleared of tall grass and the brook freed of the accumulated rubbish. The request to Mayor Childs received prompt attention.It is this attention to small matters and interest in things which tend to promote civic pride which warrants public commendation of Mayor
Childs.Yours truly,
CHARLES E. STEARNS,
Secretary.

LIBERTY DEFINED.

Standing in his place in the convention during the later part of spring of 1793, Robespierre pronounced this definition of liberty, which is almost the best of its kind: "Liberty is the power which of right belongs to every man to use all his faculties as he may choose. Its rule is justice; its limits are the rights of others; its principles are drawn from nature itself; its protector
is the law." Whatever judgment may be passed upon Robespierre's conduct, certainly his thought on this fundamental question of liberty was clear and sound.But during the years that have passed we have moved far away
from this view of what is important in life. There has grown up, not alone in America, but throughout the world, an astonishingly widespread belief in the value of regulation and restriction not only as a substitute for liberty, but directly in opposition to it. That against which the leaders of the race revolted a century and more ago is now
pressed upon us in another form
as a desirable end at which to aim. Not liberty, but regulation and restriction are the watch-words of today, and they are made so in what is sincerely believed to be the greater public interest.—President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University.

A DARKY'S PRAYER.

ster
And Dinah by de stove;
Good Lord, 'member the parson
And everybody I love;
Good Lord, 'member de chillin'
Dat you's done give to me,
And when you's done 'mem'rin'
everybody else,
Good Lord, just 'member me.

SAID OF COUNTRIES.

Give me but one hour of Scotland; let me see it ere I die.—Aytoun.The Americans equally detest
the pagantry of a king and the superdulous hypocrisy of a bishop.—Junius.The noblest prospect which a Scotchman ever sees is the high-road that leads him to England.
—Samuel Johnson.Britain is a world by itself,
and we will nothing pay for wearing our own noses.—Shakespeare.In the four quarters of the

GREEN GROW THE RASHES, O!

There's naught but care on every ban,
In every hour that passes.
Oh, what signifies the life of man.

An' 'twere na' for the lasses, O!

CHORUS.
Green grow the rashies, O!
Green grow the rashies, O!
The sweetest hours that ere I spent.

Were spent among the lasses, O!

The worldly race may riches
chase,
An' riches still may fly them.
O, an' though at last they catch
them fast,
Their hearts can ne'er enjoy
them, O!Gle me a cantle hour at e'en.
My arms about my dearie,
O, an' wardly cares and wardly
men

May a' gae tapsal teerie, O!

And you see douce, wha sneer
at this,
Ye're naught but senseless asses.
Oh, the wisest man the world
e'er saw,
He dearly lo'ed the lasses, O!

THOUGHTS ON EVIL.

Evil events from evil causes
spring.—Aristophanes.He who does evil that good may come pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.—J. C.
Hare.The more common method of getting rid of an evil is to merge
it in a greater. Thus, if one suffers a loss of half his fortune
at play, he overcomes his mortification by losing the other half.
The most ingenious expedient of this kind was that of the indigent gentleman of rank who married his washerwoman to get rid of her bill 'gainst him.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE MEETS

At the meeting of the School Committee Wednesday evening, the new Superintendent of Schools, U. G.
Wheeler, presented to the committee
figures on the attendance in the elementary grades and High School. The total attendance the first day was 7606. Last year the figure on the first day was 7434.The enrollment in the elementary grades is 5487, with 162 more pupils expected. In the Classical High there are 831, an increase of seven over last year; Technical High, 761, an increase of 40, and Vocational High, 355, an increase of eight. The total attendance in the High Schools is therefore 1947, an increase of 41. Only three schools showed a decrease,
Stearns at Nonantum, Bigelow at Newton and Emerson at Upper Falls,
but in each case the decrease was small.Resignations of Miss Calista S.
Wood of the Franklin School and Miss Charlotte E. Sewall of the Underwood School were accepted. Both have been instructors in the Newton schools for more than 20 years and their retirement was granted thru the Teachers' Retiring Board. The board considered for a short time
the merits of the Teachers' Retiring Board and Supt. Wheeler said that he believed the school authorities
should increase the pay of teachers whose salaries are small. They are obliged to join the organization and the smallest amount which must be paid in by the teachers is $35 a year.
This amount, he thought, would be a hardship to many of them.Arthur W. Ruff, a graduate of Yale, and formerly principal of the Newport, N. H., High School and the Morrisville, Vt., High School, was appointed teacher in mathematics in the Classical High School in place of J.
Albert Brack, who has resigned.Another matter considered was that of obtaining help for janitors in the schools. Since the 8-hour law was passed the janitors have been unable to do the necessary work in eight hours, and at a meeting earlier in the week they informed Mr. Wheeler that it was absolutely necessary that they be given assistance. This matter, Mr. Wheeler said, would cost much money, and that it would take several weeks to get the scale going.Plans were made to start another class for defective children. The class now conducted at the Claflin School, Newtonville, numbers 42 and is full. It is thought that a class will be organized in either the Peirce
School, West Newton, or the Burr School, Auburndale, for children from those wards. The board voted to close the schools the last Friday in October to allow the teachers to attend the convention of the Middlesex County Teachers' Association in Boston.

CITY HALL

Agent Alfred M. Russell of the Board of Health made another midnight trip among the foreign boarding houses Monday night. Fourteen houses were visited and at the lounge
at 393 Langley road, Newton Centre, 16 persons were found sleeping, with breathing space for 11 persons. In one room the agent found seven per-

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate

By John T. Burns, Auctioneer, 363 Centre St., Newton.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed from Gilbert Barker and Eliza J. Barker to Charles E. Snow, dated September 22, 1874 and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 1322, Page 608, and now held by Brigham D. James as executor under the will of Maria D. James, also known as Maria J. D. James by a decree of the Probate Court held within and for the County of Suffolk on the twentieth day of August, 1914, for breach of condition of said mortgage, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on Tuesday, October 20, 1914 at three o'clock in the afternoon upon the premises therein described, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and therein substantially described as follows:

A certain lot of land in Newton, with the buildings thereon, containing about seven thousand four hundred ninety-six (7,496) square feet, the boundary line of which runs from Brook Street North 57 1/2° West by land now or late of Mrs. Eliza M. Moore about eighty (80) feet; then North 32° East about ninety-three (93) feet, seven (7) inches by land now or late of George W. Hall; then South 58° East by land now or late of Henry C. Harrington about seventy-nine (79) feet, eight (8) inches; then Southwesterly by Brook Street about ninety-four (94) feet, four (4) inches; being the same premises conveyed to said Eliza J. Barker by two deeds of Oliver R. Hunt, one dated May 20, 1869, recorded in Middlesex South District Registry of Deeds, libro 1086, folio 143, the other dated September 21, 1874, and recorded in said Registry.

The said premises will be sold subject to any and all unpaid taxes, tax titles or municipal liens. A cash payment of three hundred (300) dollars will be required from the purchaser at the time and place of sale. Other terms will be announced at the sale or inquiry may be made of Hayes, Williams, Baker & Hersey, Attorneys at Law, 16 State Street, Boston, or of the undersigned.

BRIGHAM D. JAMES, Executor.
Present holder of said mortgage.
Address, 27 Elliot Street, Jamaica Plain

Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Middlesex, ss.
PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next of kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Mary A. Brackett late of Newton in said County, deceased.

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for Probate, by Arthur L. Brackett who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Cambridge in said County of Middlesex, on the thirteenth day of October A. D. 1914, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Newton Graphic a newspaper published in Newton the last publication to be one day, at least, before said Court, and by mailing postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, fourteen days at least before said Court.

Witness, Charles J. McIntire, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this twenty-fourth day of September in the year one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

UNDER A FLAG OF TRUCE.

A Reunion and a Compact Between the Blue and the Gray.

My father was a private in the Twenty-sixth Michigan and often told the following story, although I was never wise enough to make a note of the date or the name of the engagement. There can be no doubt, however, of the substantial accuracy of the tale.

There had been fighting, but a flag of truce had passed from the Confederate to the Union lines, and firing was suspended. The lines were close together and both behind cover. As the white flag passed out of sight toward headquarters the lines simply flowed together, meeting in the vacant space between. Officers on both sides tried to prevent it, but their efforts were fruitless. Little groups formed here and here and began to barter. The grays had tobacco, and the blues had coffee and a little sugar, and trade was lively for a time. Then they fell to discussing other things, and to understand their conversation it ought to be explained that the practice of firing on a picket line was regarded by these soldiers, hardened though they were by the awful sights of a dozen bloody fields, as little better than murder. Said a gray:

"Why do you fellows fire on picket?"

Blue—Why do you fire on picket?"

Gray—Well, we don't, only when that old Colonel B. from North Carolina is officer of the day: then we have to. He makes us do it. But I tell you, Yank, we'll shoot him! Yes, Yank, we'll shoot him!

The flag of truce came back; the negotiations had failed. The lines reformed, and firing began again. Once more poor humanity referred to the rifle and bayonet the questions it could settle in no other way. But who can doubt that in the hearts of all who witnessed the dramatic scene there was less bitterness than before the truce? There was no vulgar, sordid quarrel; no bitter, personal vendetta. Each side was pledged to the support of antagonistic principles, to maintain which they had staked their lives, but they had no quarrel with their opponents as men.—Youth's Companion.

Stage Belis.

"Parsifal" is interesting, quite apart from its artistic merit, as having had a musical instrument invented for it and named after it. The reproduction of the sound of church bells in opera was long a difficulty. Real bells simply drowned the orchestra, and all substitutes were tried in vain until Dr. Moti designed the Parsifal bell instrument, somewhat on the principle of the grand piano. Each of its five notes has six strings, which are struck by large hammers covered with cotton wool. And the result is as near to the solemn sound of church bells as the theater has been able to get.—Boston Herald.

Five Seasons.

Really there are two pie seasons—one when the blackberries, raspberries and blueberries are ripe and when apples are green and the other when the frost is on the pumpkin. The pies of the in between times are as lead to gold to the pies of other times. No pie except the pumpkin pie is a pie at all unless the juice runs from between the covers, the juice of ripened fruit charged with sun and dew. Custom makes us eat pie last. It is a hard rule, deemed only by the anticipation which helps us to go through the preliminary staples, and in the thought of the delectable to come.—Chicago Post.

First to "Put His Foot in It."

It was a bishop of olden times who first "put his foot in it," and ever since then the most ordinary layman who makes a blunder is said to "put his foot in it."

It wasn't the bishop's fault after all, but the housewives who ran to doors and windows every time the good bishop passed and asked for his blessing and while getting it they let the porridge burn. Then they blamed the bishop for the trouble and said "the bishop put his foot in it"—Milwaukee Journal.

Tom Corwin's Mouth.

Tom Corwin had an enormous mouth. He once said he had been insulted by Deacon Smith. The good brother asked for further explanation about the insult.

"Well," said Corwin, "when I stood up in the lecture room to relate my experience and I opened my mouth Deacon Smith rose up in front and said, 'Will some brother please close that window and keep it closed?'"

Seymour's Long Hit.

There have been many sensational four baggers knocked out by the heavy sluggers of the big leagues, but a hit once made by Cy Seymour in Boston is the daddy of them all. The ball sailed over the fence and fell into a coal car attached to a fast freight and was found by a brakeman when the train reached New York.

The Element of Difficulty.

"Is it hard to learn the use of a telescope?" asked the student.

"Not very," replied the candid professor. "The hardest thing about astronomy is guessing what something is after you manage to see it."—Washington Star.

Diplomacy in the Home.

Mrs. Henpeck—You never did anything really clever in your life. Mr. Henpeck—You seem to forget, my dear, that I married you.—Judge.

Confidence in another man's virtue is no slight evidence of one's own.

THE BOYLSTON STREET SUBWAY

Will Probably Open For Traffic On Monday,
 October 5

By Oct. 5 it is expected the new Boylston street subway will be open to traffic and cars will be running from its connection with the Park street system at Park street to the point of exit at Kenmore road. Already the new tube is practically finished and only a few details of construction and a few incidentals of equipping remain.

The junction with the older system is all but ready for use, the two stations need only a few touches, and the officials of the Elevated company are at work on the rearrangement of running schedules which the change in car movements will make necessary. With the opening of the new underground road the traffic in the great district which includes Newton, Brighton, Allston, Brookline and Watertown will be accelerated greatly—just how much in minutes has not been determined—and a large group of surface cars will be speeded beneath the surface before they reach the congested portion of the city.

The new tube assures to the cars coming from the sections mentioned, a clear passage of a mile and a half uninterrupted by the street movements which have impeded their progress. It removes from upper Boylston street a large number of the regular cars now using that thoroughfare, except those which approach the city by way of Ipswich street.

It is thought probable that there may be a development of travel from Cambridge for such persons as may wish to reach the Back Bay by way of Harvard bridge. These may transfer at the new Massachusetts avenue station of the subway at Massachusetts avenue and Newbury street. It is a question, however, whether this route will be favored rather than the route through the Cambridge tunnel.

Similar transfer privileges will be granted to Ipswich street passengers who desire to use the subway from Massachusetts avenue and to Cambridge-Cottage Farm cars and Commonwealth avenue cars which do not enter the subway. Transfers will be issued to inbound passengers in the subway wishing to go along Massachusetts avenue in the direction of Huntington avenue to change to any surface car inbound along Boylston street.

A complete system of block signals has been put in which will operate for the benefit of the motormen and will warn them as to the position of all traffic on the rails before them and prevent any possibility of accident. The blocks are between 350 and 400 feet in length and there are three sets of signal lights to designate the situation in the blocks at a given time.

Several new ideas have been introduced in connection with the construction of the two great stations—Massachusetts and Copley—as they will be called without the added designation of avenue and square. Both have been finished in terrazzo, a substance made of concrete, with marble chips, polished to a smooth surface. This is the first time that this material has been used in Boston's subways, and it is believed it will prove more serviceable than the tiling used in the earlier stations.

At both Massachusetts and Copley the platforms have ample room for any crowd that is likely. Both have a length of 350 feet and a width of 98 feet and would be easily capable of taking care of a train similar to that used in the Cambridge subway.

Each station will have its news booths and telephone booths and at intervals there will be distributed seats. The body of these will be of concrete after the fashion of the other later subways, but each will have an oak top.

One station runs along Boylston street underneath the sidewalk beside the Public Library, and the other has its entrance on either side of Dartmouth street. The entrances lead downward to broad lobbies and to the ticket booths. The station name is marked prominently on the walls in blue tiling.

At the surface the Massachusetts station is provided with a waiting room where passengers may remain under shelter for street cars moving along Massachusetts avenue. From the waiting room there is a short passageway leading to the ticket lobby, where the fare booths will be placed. The Elevated company has decided to do away with ticket selling there, and cash fare boxes will be used. Those who have not the required 5-cent piece may obtain change at the windows. The tiling for the stations name is in crimson, possibly out of compliment to the Harvard Club, which has quarters across the street.

NEW COMMANDER

Gethsemane Knights Templar Install Officers
 For 1914-15

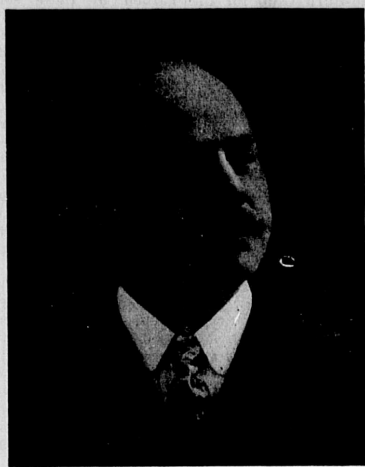

New officers were installed Tuesday night at the first meeting of Gethsemane Commandery held at Masonic Building, Newtonville, in the presence of a large number of guests and lady friends of Sir Knights.

The installing officer was Past Grand Commander William H. H. Soule and as a mark of special distinction, he was unanimously elected an honorary member of the Commandery. A similar honor was paid to the senior past commander of Gethsemane, James B. Fuller, who is now making his home at Wyola, Montana. Eminent Commander Charles J. Shepard presented PGC Soule, in receiving him and Grand Lecturer Jewett who was to act as his warder, a commandery badge. There was also a floral offering after the ceremony. The line for 1914-15 is as follows: Austin H. Decatur, EC; Charles W.

Henderson, Jr., G; George H. Dale, CG; George Breeden (PC) P; Rev. John Matteson, AP; George L. Sleeper, SW; John E. Cobb, JW; Christopher I. Flye, T; Asa C. Jeett (GL) R; Harry W. Twigg, StdB; Fred M. Blanchard, SwdB; Charles E. Fogg, W; A. Sidney Bryant, 3dG; Henry B. Nickerson, 2dG; Roland C. March, 1stG; Albert L. Walker, organist; E. E. Williams, sentinel.

Those named in the escort are: A. E. Billings, adjutant; Oscar H. Butler, Charles F. Ward, D. Frank Lord, Horton S. Allen, W. G. S. Chamberlain, Charles E. Conant, Edgar M. Parker, Walter C. Whitney, Arthur W. Porter, Harry B. Knowles, William L. Dixon, Charles E. A. Ross, Allen D. Cady, Frank J. Chaplin, Walter H. Barney, Ernest W. Paine, Edwin F. Ripley, Edward H. Bull, William H. Whitcomb, Francis C. Mann, Augustus H. Foucar, Ernest C. Fisher, L. E. Moore, W. S. Smythe, James O. Perkins, H. H. Sawyer, R. S. Hubbard, George A. B. Bacon, C. S. Parker, Charles B. Galland and F. W. K. Baker.

The first official duty of Commander Decatur was to present a past commandery's jewel to his predecessor, Charles J. Shepard.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE

Interest in the Christian Science movement is now world wide. Its churches are said to encircle the globe and wherever there is a Christian Science Church organization, there is provision for one or more lectures on the teachings of the Church. One of these lectures is just announced under the auspices of the Christian Science Church of Newton, by Mr. Virgil O. Strickler, C. S., a prominent exponent of the work and aims of the movement. The lecture will be given in the present home of the church, Players' Hall, West Newton, at 8 P. M. Thursday, Oct. 1st. The public is cordially invited.

ALDERMEN DRAW JURORS

A special meeting of the board of Aldermen was held last night principally to draw jurors for the October term of the Superior Court at Cambridge. Messrs. Arthur G. Hosmer, West Newton, Chas. F. Deane of Auburndale, Albert B. Allison of Newtonville, and Fred R. Hayward of Newton Highlands were drawn from the box.

The mayor sent in a request from the board of health for $1500 to abate a nuisance of wet, rotten and spongy land off Needham street, and which was referred.

President Blakemore appointed Aldermen Cox, Barker and Winslow a committee to examine election returns.

IMPORTANT REAL ESTATE DEAL

The recent purchase of over 155,000 square feet of land valued at $17,000 from the Gay estate on Tremont street by Mr. N. J. Soderlund and his intention to erect ten two-family houses at a cost of about $60,000 each, will make an important change in the appearance of that part of Newton. The land in question is opposite Pembroke and Marlboro streets, and runs back to the high land abutting on Washington street, and has been in the market for a number of years.

WINS DECIDING GAME

Newton Y. M. C. A. took the deciding game from the Watertown Catholic Club Saturday afternoon on the Y. M. C. A. field, 6 to 5. The game was very exciting, Newton winning out in the ninth on a well executed squeeze play by Whitney. Sheridan pitched winning ball, but his teammates were unable to hit effectively.

Essay on Shoes.

Shoes come in pairs.

They go the same way except in the case of solo legged persons.

Horseshoes are signs of good luck except when planted in the middle of one's person by the accompanying horse.

In former times we wore shoes as seldom as possible.

Our feet were about four stubs sturdier than the stubborn glee that Mr. Elegy Gray writes about.

In the gentle springtime when we first divorced the leaky winter boots that had grown lksome the southern exposure of our farm feet was of about the consistency of patent leather.

In June it resembled horn.

In September harveized steel had nothing on our hoofs.

Between barefoot days when we attended Sunday school, circus or some other devotional exercise we wore congress galsters.

The congress galsters (one of ours is now on exhibition in the Smithsonian Institution) had an elastic gore on each cheek.—Indianapolis Star.

Taught by Example.

Mrs. Mordecai Hammerfest turned pale as her husband entered the dining room for breakfast.

"Mordy," she gasped, "do you—don't you feel well?"

"Perfectly," he replied in seeming surprise.

"But—but you are in your?"

"Tell me something I don't know. Pass the butter, please."

She passed the butter, remarking nervously, "But, Mordy, dear, as you came in I saw you didn't have any shoes on."

"Well, what of it? Your hair is in curl papers, isn't it?"

"Why—yes."

"And you have on a wrapper?"

"Yes."

"Very well, then."

And he went on eating his breakfast in silence except when he asked her to pass the butter. Then he went upstairs and finished dressing, and the next morning and on succeeding mornings she reported for breakfast in regular clothes.—Boston Journal.

Changing Matter.

"Can the diamond be destroyed by intense heat?" asks a reader.

Yes. Any substance known can be vaporized in the fierce heat of the electric furnace. The word "destroyed" should not have been used. Diamond is chemically pure carbon—that is, lamp-black—and the same quantity still exists after the diamond has vanished.

Man is now able to destroy the form of all matter known to chemists—that is, matter disappears as matter, only to resolve back into its primordial elements. These are pure electricity, and nothing else exists. These man cannot create nor destroy. All that any human can create is a thought that had not been created before. But this is a theory, for all thoughts may be eternal. But here one must stop, for our minds cannot think of the meaning of the word eternal.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Burns' Cottage.

The Burns cottage at Ayer is under the charge of trustees, who purchased it in 1881 from the Ayer Shoemakers' incorporation for the sum of $4,000. The birthplace of the poet had up till that time been in use as a public house. The trustees abandoned the license and after a time removed a hall and other extraneous buildings which had been added to the premises and restored the cottage buildings as nearly as possible to the state they may have been in in Burns' time. A new museum was built at the northeast corner of the grounds. Most of the relics were removed to the museum, which now contains a priceless collection—a first or Kilmarnock edition of the poet's work, for which $1,000 was paid, and Burns' family Bible, acquired at a cost of $1,700.—London Answers.

Beef in Boston in 1740.

A writer in the Yale Review, who notes that in 1740 beef could be bought in Boston at 12 cents a pound, seems to imply that that price was all it was worth. "Invariably a steak for dinner was heralded by the vigorous pounding with the potato masher wielded by the stalwart arm of the cook." The meat, in fact, often came, he tells us, from the carcass of "a cow that no longer gave milk or a bull that had lost its bloom."

Glove Silver.

Glove silver was the strange name given to a custom which prevailed in England during the middle ages—namely, the granting of a certain sum of money to servants to buy gloves with on Lammass day, or, as it is called now, bank holiday.—London Saturday Review.

A Mistake Avoided.

"I say, old chap, I'm in shocking luck. I want money badly and haven't the least idea where I can get it."

"Well, I'm awfully glad to hear that. I thought perhaps you had an idea that you could borrow from me."—Sydney Bulletin.

Unhappy Marriages.

The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets and not in making cages.—Jonathan Swift.

Not Musical.

Boy's Mother (poking her head out of window)—Say, you kids stop picking on my Johnny. He ain't no mandolin.—Boston Transcript.

Minds that are not improving are degenerating. Like a tree, when a mind ceases to grow it begins to die.

Lost Secret of Greeks.

No greater gift could be made to our modern world than the rediscovery of the Greek physical supremacy. The secret of the method by which for one brief period they realized perfection was long since lost, no one knows how.

At present so little do we understand the principles of training which guided the Greek in his games, in his battles and his dances and made the proportions of his figures different from ours of today that Greek sculpture is in reality a puzzle to us. Certain postures fixed by the Greek sculptor seem to us contortions, bordering on physical impossibilities. There is always a terrific controversy over the restoration of Greek sculpture, and even then the arms and heads and legs we supply never look right.

All this because we do not understand the principles by which the Greek ordered the movements of his body. It was a great secret of bodily co-ordination, and the secret has been lost and with it the ability thoroughly to understand Greek art.—New York Times.

School in the Sixteenth Century.

School life at Shrewsbury in the sixteenth century was a strenuous affair. Mr. Percy Addleshaw in his "Life of Sir Philip Sidney" has an interesting account of the school at that time. "The school year," he writes, "was divided into halves. From Lady day to All Saints' day the hours of attendance were from 6 o'clock in the morning till 11, the dinner hour. In the afternoon the boys studied from 12:45 till 5 o'clock. Prayers were recited at the beginning and close of the day. If a holy day occurred in the week it was a play day, but usually the weekly day for games was Thursday. One custom then begun is still observed. * * * At the earnest request and great entreaty of some man of honor, of great worship, credit or authority an extra holiday was granted to the boys. The judges of assize, when visiting Shrewsbury, are still accustomed to ask for and obtain this boon."—Westminster Gazette.

Emerson as a Vocalist.

As a student at Harvard Ralph Waldo Emerson did not give much promise of his future greatness. His dissertation was spoken of as "a very good one, but too long to give much pleasure to the hearers." He was class poet, but only after seven others had been successively elected and had successively declined the honor. A story told by Arthur Stanwood Pler in "The Story of Harvard" goes to show that Emerson's musical efforts were even less appreciated.

Singing in the yard was a popular diversion, and early in his freshman year Emerson, wishing to have a share in the fun, went to the singing master, who said to him, "Chord."

"So I made some kind of a noise," said Emerson, "and the singing master said: 'That will do, sir. You need not come again.'"

Hidden Ability.

Old Washington White and young Calhoun Clay entered a dancing competition. But age was against Wash, and his boots, a pair of cowhides six or seven sizes too large, were against him too. The prize was awarded to the younger man.

"Look-a-yere, Misto Emplre." Uncle Wash growled, "whaffor yo' give de prize tce him?"

"Kase he done mo' beats 'n yo' done."

"Go long, man!" said Uncle Wash. "I done a lot o' steps in dese yere big boots what yo' never see!"—New York Tribune.

Kind Editors.

Needless to say, the night was cold. Brrrr!

"We have used up the last stick of wood in the house," said the young artist to the brooding poet as they sat beside the embers of a fire. "What shall we do? Must I sacrifice my latest canvas?"

"Hold!" said the poet. "I shall bring my rejected slips."

And they kept the fire going all night.—New York Post.

Muscles of the Head.

The head has seventy-seven muscles—eight for the eyes and eyelids, one for the nose, eight for the lips, eight for the jaw, eleven for the tongue, eleven for the larynx, eleven for the ears, seventeen for motions of the head and neck, one to move the hairy scalp and one for the eyebrows.

Won Her.

"Do you know," he said, "that every time I look at you I have thoughts of revenge?"

"Why?" she gasped.

"Because," he answered, "revenge is sweet." Then she told him she thought tomorrow would be a good time to see papa.

All Greek to Father.

"Pa, does money talk?"

"Yes, my boy."

"What language does it speak?"

"Some foreign tongue that I'm not familiar with."—Baltimore Sun.

Divided.

"Do you have any differences of opinion in your family?"

"Terrible! Why, it couldn't be any worse if we were all members of the supreme court."—Life.

Conclusions.

She (throwing down magazine)—Goodness! The end of that story positively startled me. He—You shouldn't jump at conclusions.—Boston Transcript.

To have faults and not strive to correct them is to add to our faults.

STEINSIECK—ANDERSON

The wedding of Miss Carol Anderson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Anderson of Newton Centre and Mr. William Townsend Steinsieck of Philadelphia took place last Saturday evening at the home of the bride on Gibbs street. The ceremony was performed at 7:30 o'clock by Rev. Dr. Thomas D. Anderson of Brookline, an uncle of the bride.

The wedding gown was of white satin with silk princess lace, the tulle veil being caught with lilacs of the valley, and the bride carried a shower bouquet of the same flowers. Mrs. Douglas Macduff, of Peckskill, N. Y., was matron of honor and wore white satin with long tunic of lavender chiffon, trimmed with satin and pearl and crystal trimming and carried Taft roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Grace K. Richardson and Miss Marjorie Mills of Newton Centre were in white satin with long tunic of pink net trimmed with pink satin and carried lavender asters. The ribbons were held by Mrs. Harry F. Cole of Newburyport, Miss Emily L. Clark of Pulaski, N. Y., Mrs. Robert W. Muther of Newton Highlands, Mrs. Harold B. Sherman of Newtonville, Mrs. Donald S. Anderson of Brookline, a sister-in-law of the bride and Miss Grace E. Johnson of Brookline.

The best man was Mr. E. Kent Lay of Philadelphia and the ushers were Mr. Donald S. Anderson of Brookline, brother of the bride and Dr. Egbert C. Steinsieck of Hightstown, N. J. A largely attended reception followed the ceremony and after a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Steinsieck will make their home at 5042 Hazel avenue, Philadelphia.

DEATH OF MRS. KINGSBURY

Mrs. Susan H. Kingsbury, wife of Mr. Herbert D. Kingsbury of New York, passed away suddenly of heart failure on Thursday evening, September 17th at the Kent House, Greenwich, Conn., where she had been passing the summer season.

Her death came as a shock to her friends in Newtonville, where she had formerly resided, and where she had many intimate and lasting friendships.

Mrs. Kingsbury possessed a charming personality, and was a kind friend and devoted mother; her charities, so unostentatiously dispensed, her cheerful willingness to relieve any real distress, her talents, and many lovable qualities, endeared her to a large circle of friends. In her home Mrs. Kingsbury loved to exercise hospitality, and her welcome was always genuine.

Services were held Sunday afternoon at 3.15 at Christ Church, Greenwich, the pastor, Rev. Dr. Thompson, officiating. The remains were taken to Wellesley Hills, where the funeral was held Monday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Baker on Seaward road.

Rev. William H. Ramsey, pastor of the Unitarian Church, conducted an impressive service at 3 o'clock. The selections "Lead Kindly Light," "O Paradise," and "Perfect Peace," were rendered by the Adelphi Quartet. There were many beautiful floral tributes and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends from New York, Boston and the Newtons. The burial was in the family lot in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Kingsbury is survived by her husband, and one daughter, Mrs. Joshua Baker of Wellesley Hills.

AUTUMN COSTUMES.

Black and Blue is a Very Smart Combination For Gowns.

The smartest combination in autumn frocks is black and blue—like a pinch. But more of the blue—in marine usually—is employed than the black, and the first is of serge or gabardine, while the second is invariably of satin.

Innumerable are the changes rung upon this bruisé hue combination.

NEW TAILORED GOWN

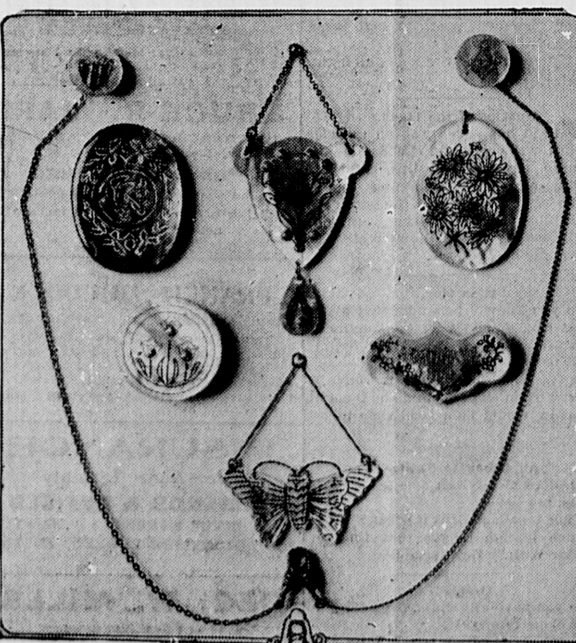

Eminently practical are the models, showing only the worsted material below the waist line, where a frock usually gets the hardest wear, and the silk fabric above the bust line, where it will be prominently in evidence and where, too, it may be instantly renewed the moment it begins to get shabby, for no self-respecting woman wears a rundown looking frock.

Illustrated here is a broadcloth suit trimmed with satin buttons and fitch bands. The plaited skirt has a flaring tunic with a hip yoke. The body of the coat is in basque effect.

Bread Custard Pudding.

One quart of sweet milk, one cupful of fine bread-crumbs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, three beaten eggs and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake until the custard sets and serve very cold.

New Art Ornaments of Etched Mother-of-Pearl Are Popular

NEW PEARL ORNAMENTS.

VARIETY is a worthy object where dress is concerned. In the search for novelties manufacturers have evolved something that seems likely to have a season of popularity. It is a new art departure in the shape of ornaments of mother-of-pearl. These are cut in fancy shapes and decorated with etched designs. Watch chains, lavallieres, pendants, brooches, beauty, hat, hair and baby pins, cuff links, the clasps and many other ornaments are thus made. The illustration shows some pretty examples of this work.

PLANNING FOR THE WINDOW GARDEN

Hanging Baskets, Flower Boxes
and Plant Stands Should Be Prepared and Planted Early.
Fancy Effects Sold in the Shops.

IT is not too early to plan for the indoor winter garden. Brackets, window boxes and flower tables may be prepared. If you can afford them there are many novelties in wicker shown in the shops. The shapes vary, and most of them can be duplicated in wood by the home carpenter. With a coat of green paint or enamel on the outside they are very presentable too. A border of vines that will hang over the sides of a box hides any crudities. If you can obtain birch bark the outside of the boxes may be covered with this. A finish of this sort is very fetching. Hanging baskets for sunny windows should not be forgotten.

A refreshing change from the window box is the dower box table. This is about three feet in diameter and is of looser weave than a good many of the other articles. The table has a deep, circular basin in the middle, a border of wicker around this and a zinc lined pocket running around the wicker border and forming the edge of the table.

You can easily see how incomparably lovely such a table would be with the central and border basins filled with flowers.

The pyramid table is one that makes a very pretty effect. It simply started out to be a pyramid and was cut short in the act—a kind of truncated form.

A combination mirror and flower basket makes a pretty wall ornament. You see, the beauty of these wicker trappings is that they are equally suitable to indoor and outdoor use. The mirror is set in a latticed frame, and the basket hangs beneath it.

For cut flowers there are long, narrow vases, as graceful as can be, and their tops look like big honeysuckles or morning glories.

EMERGENCY AID.

Useful in Many a Crisis For Women to Know How to Minister to the Injured.

A little practical knowledge of medicine is useful for every woman. Not only does it help her to diagnose the symptoms of disease in her own household and call the assistance of a physician before it has taken a firm hold on the system, but in a great crisis like that of Europe it is invaluable. There women who have never been expected to be called upon to minister to suffering have the dying and wounded at their very doors. Doubtless there are so many some must suffer from delay in receiving medical attention. In such emergencies a little skill in first aid to the injured must save many lives.

While it is to be hoped we may not have occasion to use such knowledge in America, accidents and disasters occur everywhere. The good old fashion of equipping women to minister to the minor ailments of the family was a useful and a wise one. All girls should have elementary training along these lines.

PICNIC LUNCHEON

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Newton Centre M. E. Church enjoyed a picnic luncheon on Tuesday, with the President, Mrs. G. A. Salmon, 999 Walnut street, Newton Highlands.

A delicious luncheon was served on small tables, after which a social hour was enjoyed. The regular program was given at 3 P. M., when Mrs. Coy, New England Secretary of the Young People's Work, gave a most interesting address on the work of the New England Methodist girls are doing among negro girls of the south and the different tribes of Indians from Navajos in Mexico in the south to the Alaskan tribes on the north.

Those present voted it was a red-letter day in the history of the society.

BOSTON THEATRE—One of the strongest dramatic offerings of the season will be next week's attraction at Manager Leahy's Boston Theatre. Wilton Yackaye will make his reappearance in Cleveland Moffatt's masterful drama, "The Battle".

Theaters will recall the enormous success scored by Mr. Yackaye in this stirring piece when it was presented for a long run in Boston several seasons ago.

The engagement of Mr. Yackaye like those of the preceding well known stars, that have appeared for some weeks at the head of the Majestic Players, will mark his first appearance at popular prices.

The presentation of this absorbing play, which presents a graphic picture of conditions in the slum quarters of New York City will be staged under the personal supervision of Mr. Yackaye, and no expense will be spared by Manager Leahy to give it an exact reproduction of its original.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said, in arguing for woman suffrage more than half a century ago: "Human society is made up of partialities. Each citizen has an interest and view of his own, which, if followed out to the extreme, would leave no room for any other citizen. One man is timid and another rash; one would change nothing, and the other is pleased with nothing; one wishes schools, another, armies; one, gunboats, another, public gardens. Bring all these biases together, and something is done in favor of them all. Every one is a half vote, but the next elector behind him brings the other or corresponding half in his hand. A reasonable result is had."

And Emerson went on to argue that the votes of women would give a fuller representation to the idealistic side of human nature, and to offset the overwhelming emphasis now laid upon the commercial and material.

DEATH OF HELEN BRIGGS

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Briggs have sympathy of their many friends in the great sorrow that has come to them in the sudden death of their only daughter, Helen Briggs, aged 12 years and 9 months who passed away Tuesday night after an illness of a few hours. Helen was a member of the graduating class of 1915, Bigelow school. She was a bright scholar, and of a cheerful, loving disposition, which made for her many friends.

She will be greatly missed in School, Sunday School and in the society of the Eliot Church Aids, to all of which she belonged.

Services were held this morning at the home of her parents on Newtonville avenue, Newton, Rev. H. Grant person officiating and the interment was at Dennis, Mass.
